

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

NOTE TO THE FIFTH EDITION.

SINCE the first edition of this Grammar was published, it has been introduced in numerous schools and classes requiring a more elementary treatment, and a fuller exhibition of paradigms, than those for which it was originally designed. Several teachers, indeed, of experience and skill, have found our condensed forms of inflection amply sufficient, even for beginners, — preferring to exercise the judgment and intelligence of the pupil in the construction of other forms on the model of these, as part of the business of the class-room; and considering that in this way more of the language itself is learned, and more accurately, than by the mere exercise of verbal memory. But, for the convenience of those who adopt a different method, very full Tables of Inflection have been inserted — which can be used or not, according to the teacher's choice — distinguished by a different type and marginal rule, and carefully accented, so as to facilitate their pronunciation by the common or English method. These Tables have enabled us, by relieving our pages here and there, to expand our treatment of several points where it seemed desirable; and, at the same time, to introduce considerable new material, which will be found convenient for reference.

In the Supplement we have set forth, with some fullness, for the use of teachers, the method of Instruction, and the principles of Classification by Vowel and Consonant Stems, which we have had in view in the preparation of this Manual.

CAMBRIDGE, July, 1869.

PREFACE.

MANY of the best friends of classical education have long desired a manual of elementary instruction in Latin grammar,—which lies at the foundation of a classical course,—full and accurate enough to be a practical guide to the learner, but avoiding the prodigious multiplication of details, which have so overgrown that study in our ordinary school textbooks.

In attempting to meet this want, we have been guided by the following principles:—

1. To admit only what is likely to be really useful information to the learner, and nothing which he will be likely to look for in the dictionary first.

2. To avoid, as far as possible, all subtleties of theory and technicalities of phrase; and to illustrate every point, as it is stated, by examples in correct Latin, uniformly rendered into the corresponding English idiom.

3. To aid the eye, by the typography and arrangement of the page, so as to make it an easy manual of reference. Every Latin word we have used is printed in a special type, cast expressly for this book, and is followed immediately (except in the section on Prosody), by its English equivalent, italicized. The quantities of roots and inflections are abundantly given throughout. In orthography, we have followed the most approved editions of the present day, adopting a few forms which may possibly be regarded as innovations, but varying less than some might desire from the past usage of our text-books.

In the classification and arrangement of paradigms we have expended a great deal of care. The classification of Nouns of the Third Declension, — which is based partly on that of Key, — seems to us to have great advantages over that commonly adopted. The exhibition of the Verb-forms will be found not only a material help to the learner by its compactness, clearness, and easiness of reference; but to have the special benefit of keeping distinctly in view the point (which teachers so often fail to make familiar) that all irregularities, or peculiarities of conjugation, are confined to the forms from the first or Present stem, while the others follow one uniform model throughout.

This volume is not, in any sense, an abridgment or compilation from previous writers. Except in some details of Prosody, we have not been directly indebted to any of those in use in our schools. Our plan has grown from our own wants and experience; and the examples have been selected, in general, from our own reading. Only in a few instances, where it seemed desirable for completeness, we have not hesitated to borrow them from other sources.

While we have omitted a great amount of matter which we think serves in many text-books merely to obscure to the learner the outlines of the language, it will be found that its leading forms and usages are very fully exhibited; at the same time much incidental illustration is given, not contained in any other school grammar within our knowledge. A book designed for reference, as a full treatise on etymology and syntax, very properly contains much material which would be out of place in a brief manual like the present. We do not believe that it is best for the learner to begin with as large a book as he may require afterwards; and besides, if principles are to be taught, and not dead rules, it is a clear advantage not to become wedded to any set form of words.

Two or three points seem to require brief explanation to teachers who have been in the habit of using the ordinary text-books.

First, the recognition of the Locative Case, which has been sometimes called the "Dative of Place." The fact we wish to recognize in the structure of the language is one which all grammarians admit; and to accept it will be to many persons a real relief from the old arbitrary and unintelligible rule.

In interpreting the Subjunctive, we have thought best to give it no separate translation in the paradigms.

To render it, as is often done, by the English Potential, is as misleading as any false step, so low down among the elements, can well be. We have accordingly illustrated its use, at the outset, by a score of select examples of Latin idiom; and trust in the Syntax to have made it as clear as is consistent with the brevity of our plan.

In simplifying the treatment of the Gerund and Gerundive, we have followed the best English authorities, from Milton's brief Latin "Accedence," to the works of Donaldson, Key, and D'Arcy Thompson. The phrase "Nominative of the Gerund," which we have employed, is easily understood; it suggests an explanation of the subject which many scholars prefer to that usually given; and it need not be taken as controverting the more common doctrine, that the form in question is the Neuter of the Future Passive Participle, used impersonally.

The Syntax of the Moods will be found relatively more full than other parts of the book; this we have thought warranted by the difficulty and peculiar obscurity of the subject. In general, we have not, as is usually done, treated the Subjunctive by itself; but have classified the usages in the different kinds of subordinate clauses, in nearly all of which either that or the Indicative may be employed in special relations. Here, as everywhere, we have derived constant assistance from Madvig's "Lateinische Sprachlehre," the best single treatise upon Latin grammar with which we are acquainted: from this we have taken more special points than from all other sources combined. We are far from claiming an entirely satisfactory treatment of the Subjunctive, which indeed has never yet been adequately analyzed, and which is much more difficult in Latin than in Greek. Conditional Sentences, however, in which we have followed the doctrine of Goodwin's "Greek Moods and Tenses," we believe will be found nowhere more fully explained than here.

In the matter of Prosody, we have given enough to enable the student to analyze for himself, and to read easily into metre, all the forms of verse in Virgil, Ovid, Horace, and (excepting a few lyrical passages) most of those in the Dramatic writers. For the rules and illustrations of quantity in Latin words, — omitting numerous Greek forms, — this grammar will be found, we believe, as full and accurate as any other.

In many points, both of etymology and syntax we have availed ourselves of the counsel and guidance of Professor LANE, of Harvard University; who has greatly aided us by his care in examining all of the proof-sheets, and by the suggestions of his very exact and thorough scholarship. In points of practical adaptation to the wants of classes, the long experience of our brother, Rev. T. P. ALLEN, of West Newton, Mass., has been a valuable guide. In the preparation of the Syntax, we are under especial obligation to Professor

J. B. FEULING, of the University of Wisconsin, who kindly read over the whole manuscript of this portion, and made many valuable suggestions.

In addition we would say, that, while this is intended to be a sufficient text-book for the learner,—at least until some more copious systematic treatise is required during a college course,—it is not claimed to be sufficient for the teacher. For his daily use in the class-room, as well as for his own more accurate information, he needs the ampler material so industriously gathered in the many excellent manuals in use. But, for ever so short a course in classical instruction, we hold that the language itself, and the literature which contains it, is the real object of study; and that every hour spent on the details of grammar, which does not directly help to this, is an injury to the student's progress, and a wrong to his intelligence.

Finally, this book is not meant for children. For most learners, we think, it would be better to wait till at least thirteen or fourteen, before attempting the systematic study of so difficult a tongue. At that age, an intelligent boy or girl, who studies it at all, ought to be led at once to those forms of it which can be readily understood and enjoyed.

LATIN GRAMMAR.

FORMS OF WORDS. (ETYMOLOGY.)

1. ALPHABET.

THE Latin Alphabet is the same as the English, wanting W.

Vowels are a, e, i, o, u, y. Diphthongs are ae, oe (often written æ, œ), au, eu, and in poetry ei and ui.

Mute Consonants are p, b, f, v (labial); t, d (lingual); c (k), g (palatal). Liquids are l, m, n, r. Double Consonants are x (cs), z (ds). But m may be classed as labial.

The Aspirate, h, is merely a silent breathing, and is not reckoned as a Consonant.

The earlier Alphabet consisted of 21 letters, viz.,

a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, l, m, n, o, p, q, r, s, t, u, x.

y and z were added, in words derived from Greek.

i and u, when used as consonants (having the sound of y and w), are generally written j and v: as, juvenis, a youth, for iuuenis.

k is used only in a few words, generally at the beginning, and is always followed by a.

c is usually written for k; and often for qu, (regularly when followed by u): as in cum (for quum) when; secutus (for sequutus) having followed; and, more rarely, in ecus (for equus) a horse, cotidie (for quotidie) daily, and others.

In early use, u never follows u (v), but o instead: as in volt, will. Often, i is put for il, or jl, as in obit, died; obicit, cast. Examples of variation in spelling are, -undus or -endus in gerund forms; -umus or imus in superlatives; adolescens, youth, epistula, letter, for adolescens, epistola; cena, caena, coena, supper.

The last letter of the Prepositions ab, ad, con (cum), ex, in and sub, when combined with other words, is often altered to give an even sound: as ad- or al-latus, brought, in- or im-mensus, boundless; sub- or suf-fero, sustain.

The verb est, is, is sometimes joined in spelling with the previous word, especially in the old poets, or when the two would be united by elision: as homost, he is a man, periculumst, there is danger. So vin', wilt? scin', know'st? for visne, sciane.

In the division of syllables, a consonant between two vowels is always written with the latter; as do-mi-nus, master: also, any combination of consonants which can be used to begin a word; as ho-spes, guest; ma-gnus, great (except compounds, as ob-it).

2. PRONUNCIATION.

Among us, Latin is generally pronounced like English. But there are no silent letters, except in scanning verse, by the usage called elision. (§ 80.)

c and g are made soft before e, i, y, and the diphthongs ae, eu, oe; ch is always like k; es and (in plural) os, final, are pronounced as in disease, morose. (See Supp. pp. 123–128).

The Roman pronunciation of the Vowels was no doubt like the Italian. In English, for the long and short vowels respectively, it may be nearly represented thus:—

a as in father, fast; e as in rein, met; i as in machine, fill; o as in holy, wholly; u as in rude, full.

c and g were probably always sounded hard.

3. QUANTITY.

1. A vowel before another vowel is short; as, vīa, way.

2. A diphthong is long; as, fōēdus, league.

3. A syllable formed by contraction is long; as, nīl, nothing, for nīhl.

4. A vowel before two consonants or a double consonant is long, as rēctus, straight, judēx, juror: but a short vowel before a mute followed by l or r, is common, as in volūcris, bird; that is, it may be long in verse.

The sign \bar denotes that a vowel is long; \sim that it is short.

A short vowel differs from a long one not in sound but in length; as in pātēr, father, mātēr, mother. (See §§ 77, 79).

4. ACCENT.

Words of two syllables are always accented on the Penult; as, ē'rant, they were.

Words of more than two syllables are accented on the Penult, if that is long; as, amī'cus, friend: if it is short, or common, then on the Antepenult; as, dō'minūs, master; a'lacrīs, eager. But ī in -ius has the accent.

The Penult is the last syllable but one; the Antepenult, the last but two (paene, almost; ultima, last; ante, before).

5. INFLECTION.

1. Inflection is a change made in the ending of a word to express some change in meaning; as, vōc o, I call; vōc āt, he calls.

2. That part of the word which remains unchanged is called the Root, or Stem. When a primitive form, common to Latin with other languages, it is always called the Root: thus the root of fūg a, flight, is found in the English fugitive.

3. In Latin, Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns, Participles, are inflected to express Declension (gender, number, and case); Adjectives and Adverbs to express Comparison; Verbs to express Conjugation (voice, mood, tense, number, and person).

4. Those parts of speech which are not inflected are called Particles: they are, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections. Adverbs, especially those of time, place, and manner, are also sometimes reckoned as Particles.

6. GENDER.

1. Gender may be either natural, as pūēr, boy; puellā, girl; mālum, apple: or grammatical, as lāpis, stone (masc.); mānūs, hand (fem.).

2. The following are general rules of gender: —

Names of Rivers (except a few ending in a) are masculine: as, Tāmēsia, the Thames; Rhōdānus, the Rhone.

Most names of Plants are feminine: as, cornus, cornel.

Indeclinable nouns, or Phrases used as nouns, are neuter; as, illud Cassiānum, "Cui bōnō fuērīt," that saying of Cassius, "For whose advantage it was."

3. Many Nouns may be either masculine or feminine, according to sex; as, exsūl, exile; bōs, ox, cow. They are said to be of Common Gender (if things without life, Doubtful).

4. A few are always connected with adjectives in the same gender, either masculine or feminine, independent of sex; thus, ansēr, goose, is always masculine, and vulpēs, fox, feminine. They are called Epicene.

7. CASE.

There are in Latin six Cases; namely, —

1. NOMINATIVE, used as the subject of a direct proposition: as, pātēr meīs ādest, my father is here.

2. GENITIVE (of), generally denoting origin or possession; also used with many adjectives and verbs, especially those expressing emotion: as, patriis ejūs āmicūs mīsērētūr mei, his father's friend pities me.

3. DATIVE (to or for), generally used for the indirect object, or for the person whose interest is concerned: as, dēdit mīhi cultellum: magnō mīhi ūsuī ērāt; he gave me a pocket-knife; it was of great service to me.

4. ACCUSATIVE (towards), used as the direct object of a verb, and after most prepositions: as, dum agrum ārābāt in hortum vēnī, while he was ploughing the field, I came into the garden.

5. VOCATIVE, used in direct address: as, hūc vēnī, cārē mī filiōlē, come hither, my dear little son.

6. ABLATIVE (by, from, with), used with many verbs and prepositions, especially to express instrument or separation: as, in hortō lūdēbāmūs, et cultellō mē laesīt, we were playing in the garden, and he hurt me with a knife.

All, excepting the nominative and vocative, are often called Oblique cases.

7. Some grammarians reckon also a Locative case, signifying the place where: it is generally the same in form with the Dative, and may be called the Dative of Place (§ 55, III. 3): as, Rōmae vėl Athēnis essē vēlim, I should like to be at Rome or Athens.

8. DECLENSION.

I. There are five Declensions of nouns in Latin, distinguished by the termination of the Genitive Singular, and by their characteristic or leading Vowel. These are as follows:—

DECL.	1.	Gen. Sing.	ae,	Leading Vowel	a
„	2.	„	ī (ius)	„	o
„	3.	„	is	„	i
„	4.	„	ūs	„	u
„	5.	„	ēi	„	e

II. The following are general rules of declension:—

1. The vocative is always the same in form with the nominative, except in the singular of nouns in us, of the second declension.

2. In Neuters, the nominative and accusative are always alike, and in the plural end in ā.

3. Except in neuters, the accusative singular always ends in m, and the accusative plural in s.

4. In the most ancient form, the dative singular of all the declensions ends in ī; in the third declension, the locative case may end in ē or ī.

5. The dative and ablative plural are always alike.

6. The genitive plural always ends in um.

NOMINATIVE.	stell ā,	a star.
GENITIVE.	stell ae,	of a star.
DATIVE.	stell ae,	to a star.
ACCUSATIVE.	stell ām,	a star.

DATIVE.	stell is,	to stars.
ACCUSATIVE.	stell ās,	stars.
VOCATIVE.	stell ae,	ye stars!
ABLATIVE.	stell is,	with stars.

1. Most nouns of the first declension are feminine.

2. The genitive and dative singular anciently ended in āi, which is occasionally found in a few words, as, aulāi, of a hall. There is also an old genitive in ās, found in paterfamilias.

3. The genitive plural, especially of compounds with cōla and gēna, signifying dwelling and descent, is sometimes contracted into ūm: as, caelicōlūm, of the heavenly ones.

4. The dative and ablative plural of dea, goddess, filia, daughter, and a few others, end in the old regular form ābūs.

5. Some Greek nouns end in ās, ēs (masc.), and ē (fem.) in the nominative, and n in the accusative; those in e have the genitive in es: as, Aenēās, acc. Aenēān, voc. Aenēā; Anchises, gen. Anchisae, acc. Anchisen, voc. Anchisē; Pēnēlōpē, Pene-lōpēs, Penelopēn; grammaticē or grammaticā, grammar.

10. SECOND DECLENSION. (o.)

MOST nouns of the second declension ending in ūs (ős), ēr, īr, are masculine; those ending in ūm (ōn) are neuter.

1. Some Greek words end in ős (M.) or ōn (N.); as, arctos, the Polar Bear; barbīton, lyre. The old form ős, ōn, for ūs, um, after u or v, as in servős, and the gen. pl. ōn, are sometimes found.

2. Names of towns in us (os) are feminine: as, Cōrinthus. Also, alvus, belly; cōlus, distaff; hūmus, ground; vannus, winnowing-shovel; with most names of plants.

3. The locative singular ends in i: as, Cōrinthi, at Corinth.

4. The genitive of nouns in ius and ium is often written with a single i: as filī, of a son, ingē'nī, of genius.

5. Proper names in ius drop e in the vocative; as, Vergīlius, voc. Vergī'li: also filius, son, and genius, divine guardian.

6. In the gen. plur. ōrūm is often contracted into um or om.

7. Deus, God, has voc. deus; plural, n. v. dei, dii, or dī; dat. abl. deis, dīs, dīs. For the genitive plural, dīvum or dīvom is often used.

8. Nouns in er generally drop e in declining, as in agēr, agri, field: but retain it in pūēr, boy; gēnēr, son-in-law; sōcēr, father-in-law; vespēr, evening; and compounds in -fer and -ger.

9. Vulgus, mob; pēlāgus, sea; and vīrus, poison, are neuter.

10. Many Greek names, as Orpheus, have acc. -ea, and voc. -eu.

11. THIRD DECLENSION.

NOUNS of the third declension are classed according to their stems, whether ending in a Vowel, a Liquid, or a Mute Consonant. (See Supplement, pp. 129-133).

I. VOWEL STEMS. (1)

	Ship (F.)	Cloud (F.)	Sea (N.)
SING. N.	nāvīs	nūbēs	mārē
G.	nāvīs	nubis	maris
D.	navī	nubi	marī
Ac.	navēm (īm)	nubem	mare
V.	navīs	nubes	mare
Ab.	navē (ī)	nube	marī
PLU. N.	navēs	nubes	marīā
G.	navīūm	nubium	marium
D.	navībūs	nubibus	maribus
Ac.	navēs (is)	nubes (is)	maria
V.	navēs	nubes	maria
Ab.	navībūs	nubibus	maribus

1. A few nouns in āl and ār are properly neuters of adjectives in ālis, āris, (omitting final e), and belong to this class. They are declined like mare: as, ānīm āl, ālis, pl. animalia, living thing (from anima, breath); calcār, āris, spur (from calx, heel). Here also belong imber, linter, ūter, venter (M.).

2. The old forms of sing. acc. in īm, and abl. in ī, and of the plur. acc. in īs, are found in many words. In Adjectives of this class the nom. sing. īs and abl. ī are always used. (T. 2, 3, 4, 5.

3. Several names of towns, as Praenestē, Caerē, and the mountain Soracte (N.), have the ablative ē. Sometimes, also, marē, sea, and rētē, net, in verse.

4. A few nouns, as cānis, dog, jūvēnis, youth, have the genitive plural in um. (T. 2, 6.)

5. Vīs, force, has acc. vīm, abl. vī, plur. vīrēs, vīrium, vīrībūs, strength.

6. Greek names in is, as Alexis, have the acc. im or in, voc. ī. Some in es have forms of the 1st or 2d declension: as, Achilles, gen. ei or i, dat. i, acc. ea, voc. e, abl. i; Xerxes, acc. Xerxen.

II. LIQUID STEMS.

In nouns whose stem ends in a Liquid (l, n, r), the nominative is the same as the stem, sometimes with a change of vowel, as : —

	SING. Honor (M.)	PLUR.	SING. Name (N.)	PLUR.
NOM.	hōnōr (ōs)	honōr es	nōmēn	nomīn a
GEN.	honōr is	honor um	nomīn is	nomīn um
DAT.	honor i	honor ibus	nomīn i	nomīn ibus
ACC.	honor em	honor es	nomen	nomīn a
VOC.	honor	honor es	nomen	nomīn a
ABL.	honor e	honor ibus	nomīn e	nomīn ibus

1. Masc. and fem. stems in n drop n in the nominative: as, leo, leōnis, lion; ordo, ordīnis, rank.

2. Neuter stems in ēr, ōr, have the nom. in ūs: as, corpus, corpōris, body; opus, opēris, work. Those in mīn change i to ē: as, carmen, carmīnis, song.

3. Stems in ter, with a few in ber, drop e in declension: as, pāter, patris, father (but lāter, latēris, brick).

4. Most feminines of liquid stems end in do, go, gen. -inis; or in io, gen. -ōnis: as, ārundo, arundīnis, reed; virgo, virgīnis, maiden; occāsio, occasiōnis, opportunity.

III. MUTE STEMS.

Nouns whose stem ends in a Mute generally form the nominative by adding s. If the stem ends in two consonants, the genitive plural generally has ium.

1. If the mute is a Labial (b, p), s is added simply, with or without change of vowel, as : —

	SING. City (F.)	PLUR.	SING. Chief (M.)	PLUR.
NOM.	urb s	urb es	princep s	prīncīp es
GEN.	urb is	urb ium	prīncīp is	prīncīp um
DAT.	urb i	urb ibus	prīncīp i	prīncīp ibus
ACC.	urb em	urb es	prīncīp em	prīncīp es
VOC.	urb s	urb es	princep s	prīncīp es
ABL.	urb e	urb ibus	prīncīp e	prīncīp ibus

Hiems (hiemps), hiēmis, winter, is declined like princeps: it is the only noun whose stem ends in m.

2. If the mute is a Lingual (d, t), it is suppressed before s ; in neuters, s is not added : as,

	SING. Companion (M.)	PLUR.		SING. Poem (N.)	PLUR.
NOM.	cōmēs	comītes		poēma	poemāt a
GEN.	comītis	comitum		poemātis	poematum
DAT.	comiti	comitibus		poematī	poematibus
ACC.	comitem	comites		poema	poemata
VOC.	comes	comites		poema	poemata
ABL.	comite	comitibus		poemate	poematibus

Names in as, denoting birth or residence (patrials), — as Urbīnas, of Urbīnum, — with a few others, have the gen. plural -ium.

3. If the mute is a Palatal (c, g), it unites with s in x : as,

	SING. King (M.)	PLUR.		SING. Peak (M.)	PLUR.		Throat (F.)
NOM.	rex	rēges		āpex	apīces		fauc es
GEN.	rēgis	regum		apīcis	apicum		faucium
DAT.	regi	regibus		apici	apicibus		faucibus
ACC.	regem	reges		apicem	apices		fauc es
VOC.	rex	reges		apex	apices		fauc es
ABL.	rege	regibus		apice	apicibus		faucibus

4. Peculiar forms are the following : — bōs, ox, gen. bōvis ; plur. gen. boum, dat. bōbus or būbus.

 cāro (F.), flesh, has carnis ; sēnex, old man, has sēnia.
 cīnis, ashes, pulvis, dust, vōmis, ploughshare (M.), have gen. -ēria.
 fēl, gall, and mēl, honey (N.), have the gen. fellis, mellis.
 hērēs, heir, mercēs (F.), pay, have -ēdis ; pēs (M.) foot, pēdis.
 itēr (N.), journey, has itinēris ; cāput (N.), head, has capitīs.
 jēcūr (N.), liver, has jecōris, or jecinōris ; hēpar has hepātis.
 lāc (N.), milk, has gen. lactis ; alec, brine, has alēcis.
 nox (F.), night, has gen. noctis ; nix (F.), snow, has nīvis.
 ōs (N.), mouth, has ōris ; ōs (N.) bone, ossis ; cor, heart (N.) cordis.
 pēcus (N.), cattle, has gen. -ōris ; pēcus (F.), a sheep, has -ūdis.
 sūpellex (F.), furniture, has supellectilis.
 Juppiter (Jupiter) has gen. Jōvis.

Some Greek nouns have gen. sing. -os ; acc. -a or -n ; pl. nom. -ēs ; acc. ās : as, lamps, torch, lampādīs (os), lampādem (a), lampadēs, lampadās. Those in ŷs have the acc. sing. yn.

Several Greek names in o (feminine) have gen. sing. -ūs, and belong more properly to the fourth declension ; the other cases end in o ; as, Dido, Didūs (or -ōnis), Dido, etc.

IV. RULES OF GENDER.

Masculine endings are o, or, os, er, es (lingual).

Feminine endings are as, es (vowel-stems), is, ys, x, s (following a consonant); also do, go, io, and ūs (increasing long).

Neuter endings are a, e, i, y; c, l, n, t; ar, ur, ūs (increasing short).

The most important exceptions are:—

MASC. — amnis, river; as, as; axis, axle; caulis, stalk; collis, hill; crinis, hair; ensis, sword; fascis, bundle; †finis, end; fornix, arch; †fūnis, rope; ignis, fire; lāpis, stone; orbis, circle; mānes, the shades; mensis, month; pānis, bread; piscis, fish; postis, post; †pulvis, dust; sanguis, blood; sentis, brier; unguis, nail; vepres, bramble; sāl, salt; sōl, sun; ordo, order; dens, tooth; mons, fountain; mons, mountain; pons, bridge; rūdens, cable; †calx, heel, lime; †cortex, bark; grex, herd; silex, flint; cardo, hinge; and names of material objects in io.

FEM. — arbor, tree; cāro, flesh; halcyon, kingfisher; compes, fetter; mercēs, reward; mergēs, sheaf; quiēs, rest; sēgēs, crop; tēgēs, mat; cōs, whetstone; dōs, dowry; ēōs, dawn.

12. FOURTH DECLENSION. (u.)

	SING. Car (M.)	PLUR.	SING. Knee (N.)	PLUR.
NOM.	curr ūs	curr ūs	gēn u	gen uā
GEN.	curr ūs (uis)	curr uum	gen u (ūs)	gen uum
DAT.	curr ui (ū)	curr ibus	gen u	gen ibus
ACC.	curr um	curr ūs	gen u	gen ua
VOC.	curr us	curr us	gen u	gen ua
ABL.	curr u	curr ibus	gen u	gen ibus

1. Nouns in us are masculine: but ācus, needle; cōlus, distaff; dōmus, house; ficus, fig; īdus, the Ides; mānus, hand; porticus, gallery; tribus, tribe, are feminine.

2. Dōmus, house, has abl. sing. domo; plural, gen., domorum or domuum; acc. domos: domi, less frequently domui (locative), means at home.

3. The following have the dat. and abl. plural in ibus: artus, limb; partus, birth; †portus, harbor; tribus, tribe; †vēru, spit; with nouns in cus: as, lācus, lake.

4. Most nouns of the fourth declension are formed from the Supine stem of verbs: as, cantus, song (cāno).

† Sometimes.

13. FIFTH DECLENSION (e).

The only complete nouns of this declension are dies, day, and res, thing. All, except dies, are feminine.

	SING. Thing (F.)	PLUR.	Poverty.
NOM.	rēs	rēs	paupēriēs
GEN.	rēi	rērum	pauperiēi
DAT.	rēi	rēbus	pauperiēi
ACC.	rem	res	pauperiem
VOC.	res	res	pauperies
ABL.	re	rebus	pauperiē

1. Most nouns of the Fifth Declension want the plural.
2. Dies, day, is sometimes feminine in the singular, especially in phrases indicating a fixed time: as, constitutā die, on the set day.
3. The termination of the nominative singular is always ies, except in fides, faith; plēbes, commonalty; res, thing; spes, hope.

14. IRREGULAR NOUNS.

1. Wanting the Singular: as, libēri, children; arma, weapons; pēnātes, household gods.
So the names of Festivals: as, Sāturnālia, Feast of Saturn; Quinquātrus (gen. -uum), of Minerva. Also, many names of towns: as, Vēii, Syracūsae, Ecbātāna.
2. Wanting the nominative: as, dāpis, of food; frūgis, of fruit (plural complete).
3. Found only in one or two cases: as, fors, forte, chance; vīcis (gen.), vicem, vice, vices, vicibus, change or turn; sponte (suā sponte, of his own accord);
injussu, without orders.
4. Indeclinable (neuters): as, fās, right; nēfās, wrong; pondō, pound.
5. Some nouns have two or more forms of declension, and are called Heteroclites: as, margārita, -ae (F.), or um, -i (N.), a pearl. This occurs with several of the fifth declension: as, māteries, -ēi; a, -ae, material: saevities, -ēi; saevitia, -ae; saevitūdo, -inis, cruelty.

II. VARIABLE.

1. Many nouns vary in meaning as they are found in the singular or plural; some also in gender (heterogeneous): as, aedes, is (F.), temple.

auxilium (N.), help.

carcer (M.), dungeon.

castrum (N.), fort.

cōpia (F.), plenty.

finis (M.), end.

grātia (F.), favor.

impēdimentum (N.), hinderance.

littera (F.), letter (of alphabet).

lōcus (M.), place [pl. loci (N.)].

ōpis (F. gen.), help.

plāga (F.), region [pl. plāga, blow].

sāl (M. or N.), salt.

aedes, ium, house.

auxilia, auxiliaries.

carcēres, barriers (of a racecastra, camp. [course.]

copiae, troops.

gratiae, thanks.

loci, passages in books.

opes, resources, wealth.

sestertius (M.) means the sum of $2\frac{1}{2}$ asses, = about 4 cents.

sestertium (N.) means the sum of 1000 sesterti, = about $40.

decies sestertium means the sum of 1000 sestertia, = $40,000.

2. Sometimes a noun in combination with an adjective takes a special signification, both parts being regularly inflected: as, jusjūrandum, jūrisjurandi, oath.

respublica, reipublicae, commonwealth.

15. PROPER NAMES.

A Roman had regularly three names. Thus, in the name Marcus Tullius Cicero, we have —

Marcus, the praenōmen, or personal name;

Tullius, the nomen; i.e., name of the Gens, or house, whose original head was Tullus; this name is an adjective;

Cicero, the cognomen, or family name, often in its origin a nickname, — in this case from cīcer, a vetch, or small pea.

Women had no personal names, but were known only by that of their gens. Thus the wife of Cicero was Terentia, and his daughter Tullia. A younger sister would have been called Tullia secunda (or minor), and so on.

Names of the Months are Adjectives in Latin.

1. Unusual forms are in parenthesis ; Greek forms in Italics.

2. In the Second Declension, when the stem ends in er, ir, the terminations of the nom. and voc. singular are not added.

3. In vowel-stems of the Third Declension, the characteristic vowel (i) is in several of the cases absorbed in the termination; but it remains in the gen. pl. ium, and in some words in the acc. and abl. sing. im, i, and the acc. plur. is (eis).

4. The accusative im and abl. i are found in names of rivers in is; also in āmussis, † āquālis, būris, cannābis, † clāvis, † ferbris, mēphitis, † messis, † nāvis, pelvis, praesēpis, † puppis, rāvis, † restis, sēcūris, † sēmentis, sītis, † strīgīlis, † turris, tusis, vis.

5. The following also have the abl. sometimes in i: amnis, civis, finis, fustis, ignis, imber, orbis.

6. The gen. plur. ium is found (rarely with acc. pl. in is), in—

a. Vowel-stems, including neuters in al and ar, and the masculines imber, linter, ūter, venter:—except āpis, cānis, fōris, jūvenis, mūgīlis, prōles, strīgīlis, strues, vātes, and vōlucris, and occasionally a few others, which have um;

b. Mute-stems ending in two consonants, except some in nt;

c. Local names (adjectives) in as, as nostras, of our country; also Quīris, Samnis, Penātes, optīmātes, and sometimes other nouns in as, as aetas, civitas;

d. And the following:—dos, fauces, † fraus, † fur, glis, † lar lis, mas, † mus, nix, † ren, strix, trabs, vis.

7. Nouns in io, abstract and collective,—as rātio, reason; lēgio, legion,—are feminine. The following, denoting material objects, are masculine:—curcūlio, weevil; pāpilio butterfly; pūgio, dagger; scīpio, staff; septemtrio, the north; stellio, lizard; struthio, ostrich; tītio, firebrand; unio, pearl; vespertilio, bat.

8. The following in ūs are feminine:—incus, anvil; jūventus, youth; pālus, marsh; pēcūs, sheep; sālus, safety; sēnectus, old age; servītus, slavery; subscus, dovetail; tellus, earth; virtus, virtue.

† Sometimes.

ADJECTIVES.

16. INFLECTION.

ADJECTIVES are declined like Nouns; and are either of the First and Second Declension, or of the Third.

I. Adjectives of the first and second declension are thus declined:—

	M.	F.	N.
SING. N.	cār ūs	cār ā	cār um, Dear .
G.	car ī	car ae	car ī
D.	car ō	car ae	car ō

Ab	car īs	car īs	car īs

Like carus are declined most adjectives, and all participles, ending in us. In adjectives ending in er, the masculine is declined like puer, or liber (§ 10): as,

M. miser, F. misera, N. miserum, gen., miseri, etc., wretched.
āter atra atrum “ atri “ black.

The following have the genitive singular in ius, and the dative in i, in all the genders (See sōlus, T. 3):—

ālius (N. aliud), other. nullus, no; ullus, any (with negatives).
alter, other (of two). sōlus, alone. ūnus, one.
neuter, -trius neither. tōtus, whole. ūter, -trius which (of two).

alius has gen. alius, dat. alii; alter has altērius, alteri.

II. Adjectives of the third declension are thus declined :—

1. Adjectives of vowel-stems end in is (M., F.), and e (N.), and are called adjectives of two terminations. They have the abl. in i, and gen. pl. ium, and are declined like nāvis and māre (§ 11, 1.). A few have also a masc. nom. in er (declined like uter, T. 1), and are called adjectives of three terminations.

2. In adjectives of consonant-stems, — sometimes called adjectives of one termination, — the three genders are alike in all the cases except the acc. singular, and the nom. and acc. plural. The most common termination of the nominative is ns or x, the former including the present participle of all verbs. The abl. sing. ends in e or i, and the gen. plur. in ium (rarely contracted into um), except in those of liquid stems, with a few others.

17. COMPARISON.

I. The Comparative degree adds ior, ius to the stem, and is declined as carior; the Superlative adds issimus, a, um, and is declined as carus. Thus :—

carus, dear; carior, dearer; carissimus, dearest.

1. Adjectives in er form the superlative by adding rimus to the nominative: as, niger, black: nigrior, blacker; nigerrimus, blackest.

2. Six adjectives, fācīlis, difficilis, easy, hard; sīmilis, dis-similis, like, unlike; grācīlis, slender; hūmīlis, low, form the superlative by adding -līmūs to the stem: as, facillimus, easiest.

3. Compounds in -dīcus, saying; -fīcus, doing; -vōlus, willing, are compared as if from corresponding participles in -ns: as, mālēdīcus, slandering, maledicentior, maledicentissimus; malefīcus, mischievous, maleficentior, maleficentissimus; malevolus, spiteful, malevolentior, malevolentissimus.

4. Adjectives in us preceded by a vowel, are generally compared by means of the adverbs māgīs, more, and maxīmē, most: as, idōneus, fit; magis idoneus, maxime idoneus.

II. The following are compared irregularly:—

bōnus, mēlior, optīmus, good, better, best.

mālus, pējor, pessimus, bad, worse, worst.

magnus, mājōr, maximus, great, greater, greatest.

parvus, mīnōr, minimus, small, less, least.

multum, plūs, (N.) plurimum, much, more, most.

multi, plūres, plurimi, many, more, most.

nēquam (indecl.), nequior, nequissimus, worthless.

frūgi (indecl.), frugālior, frugalissimus, useful, worthy.

dexter, dexterior, dextimus, on the right, handy.

III. The following comparatives and superlatives, denoting order in place or time, are formed from certain prepositions:—

[citrā, this side] cītērior, cītīmus, nearer, nearest.

[extrā, outside] extērior, extrēmus, outer, outmost.

[infrā, below] infērior, infīmus or īmus, lower, lowest.

[intrā, within] intērior, intīmus, inner, inmost.

[post, after] postērior, postrēmus or postīmus, latter, last.

[prae, before] prior, primus, former, first.

[prōpē, near] propior, proximus, nearer, next.

[suprā, above] sūpērior, suprēmus or summus, higher, highest.

[ultrā, beyond] ultērior, ultīmus, farther, farthest.

The positives infērus, extērus, &c., are rarely used as adjectives. But the plurals extēri, foreigners; postēri, posterity; supēri, the heavenly gods, and infēri, those below, are common.

From the nouns jūvēnis, youth, sēnex, old man, are formed the comparatives jūnior, younger, senior, older. For the superlative the phrase minimus or maximus natu is used, the noun natu being often understood: as, maximus fratrum, the eldest of the brothers.

senior fratrum would mean the elder of the two.

IV. Some adjectives want the positive: as, dētērior, detrerrimus, worse, worst.

pōtior, potissimus, more, and most preferable [pōtis, able].

Some want the comparative: as, falsus, falsissimus, false, most false.

inclītus (inclūtus), inclitissimus, famous.

nōvus, novissimus, new, newest or last (as in novissimum agmen, the rear-guard).

Some want the superlative: as, ālācer, alacrior, eager.

ōpimus, opimior, rich.

V. 1. The Comparative often denotes a considerable or excessive degree of a quality: as, brēvior, rather short; audācior, too bold. It is used instead of the superlative where only two are spoken of: as, mēlior imperatorum, the best of the (two) commanders.

2. The comparative takes the ablative, or quam, than: as, tribus unciis altior est fratre (or quam frater), he is three inches taller than his brother. (See § 54, v.)

3. Comparison between adjectives is expressed by comparatives with quam: as, lātius quam altius est flūmen, the stream is rather broad than deep.

4. The Superlative (of eminence) often denotes a very high degree of a quality: as, maximus numerus, a very great number; optimus quisque, all the best.

5. The superlative with quam indicates the very highest degree of a quality: as, quam plurimi, as many as possible.

The ablative singular commonly ends in i. Many adjectives, as, inops, have only i; some, as sospes, only e. Comparatives, and participles in ns, when used as participles, have usually e; so also have adjectives used as nouns, as inops, a poor man, inope.

Liquid stems, and a few mute stems, as dives, inops, supplex, particeps, with those that have abl. sing. e, have gen. pl. um.

Some adjectives, as inops, sospes, are found only in the masc. and fem., and may be called adjectives of Common Gender.

Plus, more (N.), has gen. pluris; plur., nom. plures, plura; gen. plurium, etc.: complures, several, has sometimes neut. pl. compluria. All other comparatives are declined like altior.

1. Unus a um has genitive unius, dative uni (§ 16, I.).
2. Duo (also ambo, both) is thus declined:—

	M.	F.	N.
Nom.	duo	duae	duo
Gen.	duorum	duarum	duorum
D. Ab.	duobus	duabus	duobus
Ac.	duos, duo	duas	duo

3. Tres is declined regularly, like the plural of brevis (§ 16). The other cardinal numbers up to centum (100) are indeclinable. Mille is indeclinable as an adjective; but when several thousands are spoken of, the noun mīlia is used, declined like the plural of mare (§ 11, I.), the noun described being put in the genitive plural: as, cum decem milibus milītum, with ten thousand men.

4. The numeral adverbs are: sēmēl, once; bīs, twice; tēr, thrice; quātēr, four times. Those of higher numbers end in iens or iēs: as, quinq̄uiens (or quinq̄uiēs), decies, mīlies, &c.

II. DISTRIBUTIVE.

1. singūli	12. duōdēni	200. ducenti
2. bini	13. terni dēni , &c.	300. trecenti
3. terni, trīni	20. vicēni	400. quadringēni

9. nōvēni	80. octōgēni	1000. millēni
10. dēni	90. nōnāgēni	2000. bis milleni
11. undēni	100. centēni	10,000. decies milleni

Distributives are used, —

1. As in the phrase singulas binis navibus obiciēbant, they matched the ships one against every two. — Cæs. B.C., I. 58.

2. Instead of cardinals, when the noun is plural in form but singular in meaning: as, bina castra, two camps: (duo castra would mean two forts): but una castra, one camp.

3. In multiplication: as, bis bina, twice two; quater septēnis diebus; i.e., in four weeks.

P R O N O U N S.

19. PERSONAL AND REFLECTIVE.

I. The personal pronouns ego, I, and tu, thou, are thus declined : —

	FIRST PERSON.	SECOND PERSON.
	I.	thou (you.)
SING. N.	ĕgŏ	tū
G.	meī	tūī
D.	mīhi (mī)	tībi
Ac.	mē	tē
Ab.	mē	tē
PLUR. N. Ac.	nōs	vōs
G.	{ nostrum nostrī	{ vestrum (vostrum) vestrī (vostrī)
D. Ab.	nōbīs	vōbīs

II. The personal pronouns of the first and second persons are used also reflectively : as, ipse te laudās, you praise yourself.

The reflective pronoun of the third person, himself, herself, themselves, is thus declined : —

G. sui D. sibi Ac. and Ab. sē, or sēsē

It regularly refers to the subject of the sentence or clause.

III. The genitives nostrum, vestrum, are used partitive-ly : as, unusquisque vestrum, each one of you ; mei, tui, sui, nostrī and vestrī are used objectively (See § 50, III.) : as, mēmōr sis nostrī, be mindful of us.

For the genitive of possession, the adjective pronouns meus (voc. masc. mi), tuus, suus, noster, vester, are always used, declined as in § 16, I. : as, mi fili, my son ; cum amicis meis, with my friends.

They agree with genitives in such phrases as tuam ipsius patriam prodidisti, you have betrayed your own fatherland ; suo solius periculo, at his own peril only. — Cic. Cat., IV. 11.

The preposition cum, with, is joined enclitically with the ablative of the personal pronouns : thus, nobiscum ambulat, he is walking with us.

The enclitics -ce, -met, -pte, are emphatic.

20. DEMONSTRATIVE.

I. The demonstrative pronouns hic, this ; is, iste, ille, that ; and ipse, self, are thus declined : —

SINGULAR.

N.	hic	haec	hoc	is	eā	id
G.		hujus			ejus
D.		huic			eī
Ac.	hunc	hanc	hoc	eum	eam	id
Ab.	hōc	hāc	hōc	eō	eā	eō

PLURAL.

N.	hī	hae	haec	īi (eī)	eae	eā
G.	hōrum	hārum	hōrum	eōrum	eārum	eōrum
D. Ab.		hīs			eīs or iīs
Ac.	hōs	hās	haec	eōs	eās	eā
Ab.		hīs			eīs or iīs

The Demonstratives iste, ista, istud ; ille, illa, illud, that ; ipse, ipsa, ipsum, self, have gen. ius, dat. i : otherwise, they are declined like carus, but with neut. acc. like the nominative (T. 5).

II. Hic is sometimes called the demonstrative of the first person ; iste (used especially in reference to the person spoken to, and frequently implying contempt), the demonstrative of the second person ; ille (referring to more remote objects, and used especially of those celebrated or well known), the demonstrative of the third person. Ille and hic are often used as “the former” and “the latter.” Hic, or hic hōmo, is sometimes equivalent to ego, I : as, tu si hic sis, if you were I. — Ter. Andr. II. 1. ille has an old form ollus.

Is is used especially in reference to something just mentioned, or as antecedent to the relative qui, who. It is used oftener than the other demonstratives as a personal pronoun of the third person, and is sometimes nearly equivalent to the article a or the: as, eum quem esse hostem compēristi, one whom you have found to be a public enemy. — Cic. Cat. I. 11.

habētis eum consilem qui . . . non dubitet, you have a consul who will not hesitate. — Id. IV. 11.

Ipsē, self, the intensive pronoun, is frequently joined with another pronoun: as, nos ipsi, or nosmetipsi, we ourselves; or it may be used independently in either person: as, ipsi adestis, you are yourselves present. Often it may be translated very: as, ipsi colles olāmant, the very hills cry out.

Idem, eādem, Idem, the same, is declined like is; m being generally changed to n before d, as in the accusative eundem.

21. RELATIVE.

I. The relative pronoun qui, who, is thus declined: —

	SINGULAR.			PLURAL.
N.	qui	quae	quōd	qui	quae	quae (quā)
G.	cūjus (quolus)			quōrum	quārum	quōrum
D.	cui (quol)			quibūs or quīs
Ac.	quem	quam	quōd	quōs	quās	quae
Ab.	quō	quā	quō	quibūs

1. An old form of the ablative is qui; it is oftenest used as an interrogative adverb, how?

The indefinite relative, quicumque, whoever, is declined like qui; quisquis, whoever, rarely occurs except in the forms quisquis, quicquid (quidquid), and quoquo.

2. The preposition cum, with, is affixed to the ablative of qui, as to the personal pronouns; as, quocum, quibuscum, quicum, with whom.

II. 1. Qui, who, is also used as an interrogative; but when used substantively, the nominative singular is quis (rarely qui), quae, quid; as, quis adest? who is here? quid ais? what do you say?

2. As an adjective, qui is frequently, and quod always, used: as, qui (or quis) homo est? what man is it? quod bellum tum gerēbātur? what war was then waging?

3. Quantus, how great; quālis, of what kind, and the like, are also used both as relative and interrogative, corresponding to tantus, so great; tālis, such, etc. (§ 22, i.).

4. The conjunction atque, ac, is often used as a relative: as, pro eo ac mēreor, according to what I deserve. — Cic.

III. The indefinite pronouns quispiam, any; quisquam, any at all; quīvis, quīlibet, any you please; quisque, every; unusquisque, each; and quīdam, a certain one, are declined like quis or qui; having the neuter forms quid (subst.), and quod (adj.).

Aliquis, some, and quis, any, usually have qua for quae, except in the nom. fem. plural. Quis, any, is seldom used, except after si, if; ne, lest; num and eo, whether (interrog.).

22. CORRELATIVES.

1. These are demonstrative, relative, interrogative, and indefinite; the demonstratives generally commence with t or i; the relatives and interrogatives (which are alike) with qu; the indefinites with alī: as, tantus, so great; quantus, as or how great; aliquantus, of some size.

ibi, there; (hic, istic, illic); ūbi, where; alicūbi, somewhere.

eo, thither; (huc, illuc); quo, whither; aliquo, to some place.

indē, thence; (hinc, illinc); undē, whence; aliunde, from some place.

tum, tunc, then; quum or cum, when; quando? when? aliquando, at sometime, or at length. (See §§ 41, II. 2; 43, 7.)

tōt, so many; quōt, as or how many; aliquōt, a number of.

These last are indeclinable: as, per tot annos, tot proeliis, tot impērātōres, so many commanders, for so many years, in so many battles. — Cic.

2. Alter . . . alter (where only two are spoken of), and ālius . . . ālius, one . . . another, are used as correlatives in such phrases as — alter ārāt, alter sērīt, one ploughs, the other sows.

alii mē laudant, alii culpant, some praise me, others blame.

alius aliūd āmāt, one likes one thing, and one another (§ 47, IX.).

hī fratres inter sē āmant alter altērum, these brothers love one another.

With all relatives, the enclitic affix -cumque, -soever, may be used: as, qualiscumque, of what kind soever.

VERBS.

23. STRUCTURE.

1. Latin verbs have two VOICES, viz. Active and Passive; — four MOODS, viz. Indicative, Subjunctive, Imperative, Infinitive; — four PARTICIPLES, viz. the Present and Future Active, the Perfect Passive, and the Gerundive; — two VERBAL NOUNS, viz. the Gerund and the Supine; — six TENSES, viz. Present, Imperfect, Perfect, Pluperfect, Future, and Future Perfect; — of PERSONS, three in the singular and three in the plural.

2. The future and future perfect are wanting in the subjunctive mood; and the perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect in the passive voice: their places being supplied by participles, combined with corresponding tenses of the verb esse, to be; but for the Fut. Perf. Subjunctive, the perfect is used.

3. The passive form has often a reflective meaning: as, cingitur gladius, he girds on his (own) sword.
velāmur capita, we veil our heads. — Virg. Æn. III. 545.

24. MOODS.

I. The Indicative Mood is used for direct assertion or interrogation.

II. The Subjunctive Mood is used for dependent propositions and indirect questions. It is generally translated by the English indicative, especially when preceded by particles expressing condition or result; sometimes by the potential, may, might, or would, especially after particles expressing motive or purpose.

Examples of the use of the subjunctive in dependent constructions are as follows:—

- nescio quid scribam, I know not what to write. (§ 67, I. 1.)
 nescio quid scribas, I know not what you are writing.
 ūt scribam, non est sātis, though I write, it is not enough. (§ 61, 2.)
 sīne scribam, let me write. (§ 64, IV.)
 licet scribas, you may write.
 cāve scribas, do not write. (§ 58, III.)
 non is sum qui scribam, I am not the one to write. (§ 65, I.) vēreor ne scribat, I fear he will write. (§ 64, III.)
 vereor ut scribat, I fear he will not write.
 sunt qui pūtent, there are some who think. (§ 65, IV. 2.) nemo est quin putet, there is none but thinks.
 sēdet (sedēbat) illic, tamquam scribat (scribēret), he sits (sat) yonder as if he were writing. (§ 61, I.) si haec sciret, non venīret, if he knew this, he would not come.
 si haec cognoscat, non vēniat, if he should find this out, he would not come. (§ 59, IV. 1.)
 nisi haec cognōvisset, non vēnisset, if he had not found this out, he would not have come. (§ 59, IV. 2.)
 vēnit ut vidēret, he came to see. (§ 64, I.) ēvēnit ut videret, it turned out that he saw. (§ 70, II.)
 tam propē erat ut videret, he was so near as to see. (§ 65, I.)
 quis non gaudeat haec videns? who would not be glad to see this? (§ 60, 3.)
 cum domum rediisset, mortuus est, when he had returned home, he died. (§ 62, I.)

An Indirect Question is an assertion in which a question is implied, without being expressed: thus—quis adest? who is here? is a direct question; but dic mihi quis adsit, tell me who is here, is an indirect question.

III. 1. The Imperative present is used as in English; but its place is often supplied (always in the first person) by the present or perfect subjunctive: as, nē crēde cōlōri, do not trust complexion. (§ 58, III.)

 dum vivimus vivāmus, while we live let us live.

Not with the Imperative is nē; and nor, nēvē.

2. The future is used especially for edicts and laws: as, regi imperii duo sunt, quique consules appellantur, there shall be two of kingly authority, and they shall be called consuls. — Cic. Leg. III. 3.

hominem mortuum in urbe ne sepelito neve urito, a dead man in the city thou shalt not bury nor burn. — XII. Tab. in Cic.

IV. The Infinitive is used — 1. As the Object of a Verb: as, audire non possum, I cannot hear.

2. With a Subject-Accusative, especially after Verbs of knowing, thinking, and telling: as, dixit me adesse, he said that I was present.

3. As an Indeclinable Noun (with or without a subject-accusative), when it is often rendered in English by the participial noun: as, vivere est cogitare, living is thinking.

misereat me te esse pauperem, it grieves me that you are poor.

25. PARTICIPLES.

I. The Present Participle ends in ns (corresponding to our participle in ing), and is declined like sapiens, § 16, II.

When used as an adjective, the ablative singular ends in i: as, flōrenti urbe pōtitur, he takes a flourishing city; but, fiōrente urbe, while the city flourished (§ 54, x.).

The Future Active Participle (frequently expressing purpose) ends in urus. The Perfect Passive Participle ends in us, and the Gerundive (sometimes called the Future Passive Participle), in ndus; they are declined like cārus (§ 16, I.).

The Gerundive in the nominative has the meaning of ought or must: as, dēlenda est Karthāgo, Carthage must be destroyed; but in other cases it is translated as if it governed the noun it agrees with: as, ad pācem pētendam, to beg peace.

II. The use of these participles is seen in the following examples: — tē Id dicentem audivi, I heard you say that.

sāpientia Dei omnia gūbernantia, the wisdom of God, who governs all.

Cūrio ad fōcum sēdenti, to Curius as he sat by the fire.

Romā profectus Athēnas vēnit, he set out from Rome and came to Athens.

Romam vēnit lūdos spectāturus, or, ad spectandos ludos, he came to Rome to see the games.

bōna pēto semper dūrātūra, I seek goods that will last forever.

rēluctante nātūrā, irritus lābor est, if nature refuses, toil is vain.

anno post exactos reges decimo, ab urbe conditā ducente- simo quingagesimo quarto, the tenth year after the kings' banishment, and the 254th from the founding of the city.

And the Perfect Participle in English must often be rendered by other constructions in Latin: as, cum Romam rediisset, in fōrum vēnit, having returned to Rome, he came into the forum.

equitātu praemisso, subsequēbātūr omnibus cōptis, having sent forward the cavalry, he followed close with all his forces. — Cæs. B.G. II. 19.

26. GERUND AND SUPINE.

I. The Gerund is inflected as a Neuter Noun of the Second Declension. Its use is as follows:—

N. scribendum est mihi, I have to write.

G. lābor scribendi, the task of writing.

D. ūtile scribendo, serviceable for writing.

Ac. inter scribendum, while writing.

Ab. scribendo respondit, he answered by writing.

But when the Gerund would take a direct object, the Gerundive is usually employed: as,

N. scribenda est mihi epistōla, I have to write a letter.

G. labor scribendae epistōlae, the task of writing a letter.

NOTE.—The nominative of the Gerund or Gerundive is the regular way in Latin of expressing ought or must. (See § 73.)

II. The Former Supine is in form the accusative, and the Latter Supine the ablative, of a verbal noun of the fourth declension. (§ 12, 1.)

The Former is used after verbs of motion, especially in dialogue or familiar speech: as, hūc vēnit consultum, he has come hither to consult; the Latter after certain adjectives: as, horribīle dictu, shocking to tell. The latter is found only in a few verbs.

27. TENSES.

I. The Present tense expresses an action or state as now continuing; as, vōco, I am calling; vocor, I am [being] called, i. e. some one is now calling me.

It is sometimes used, as in English, to give life to narrative: as, Caesar convōcat suos, Cæsar summons his men; and may sometimes be rendered by the Perfect in English: as, jamdiu te vōco, I have been long calling you.

II. The Imperfect is used to tell a condition of things formerly existing. Hence it is employed —

1. In Descriptions: as, ŕrant omnīno itīnēra duo . . . mons altissimus impendēbat, there were in all two ways . . . a very high mountain overhung. — Cæs. B.G. I. 6.

2. To relate a Continued or Repeated Action: as, saepē dīcōbat, he would often say; mīrābar, I used to wonder.

3. To state the Circumstances attending an action or event: as, dum haec gērēbantur, while this was going on.

III. The Perfect is used to tell an action or event occurring at a given time in the past. Hence it is employed —

1. In Narration (perfect aorist, indefinite, or historical): as, vēni, vidī, vīcī, I came, saw, conquered.

2. After ūt, ūbi, posteaquam or postquam, when, (with a leading verb in a past tense), as equivalent to the pluperfect: as, haec ūbi dixit, abiit, when he had said this, he went away.

3. It is also used to relate a past act or state in reference to the present time (perfect definite or relative): as, pāter te jam vocāvit, your father has already called you.

4. In the subjunctive, it usually follows a leading verb in the present; as, nescio utrum Itā evēnērit necne, I don't know whether it happened (or has happened) so or not.

In Latin, and in all languages derived from Latin, there are two past tenses, — the Perfect, or Preterite, which is used for narration, to tell the main fact; and the Imperfect, which is used for description, or to state the attending circumstances: as, dum Cicero domi manēbat, Caesar interfectus est, while Cicero staid at home, Cæsar was slain.

The Gothic languages, including English, have only one Past tense.

IV. The Future and Future Perfect are used, though with greater accuracy, like the corresponding tenses in English: as, cum audivēro, scribam, when I [shall] have heard, I will write.

V. Tenses are distributed in these two classes, —

1. PRIMARY, including Present, Perfect [Definite], and Future.

2. SECONDARY, including Imperfect, Perfect [Historical], and Pluperfect.

VI. The Perfect, Pluperfect, and Future Perfect, of the Active Voice, are derived from a stem (wanting in the Passive), which is usually formed by adding v [u] or s, with or without a connecting vowel, to the Stem of the Present; this is called the Second or Perfect Stem: as, voc o, vocav i; — dic o, dix i.

In the Passive, these tenses are supplied by adding the corresponding tenses of esse, to be, to the Perfect Participle, made by adding the endings us, a, um, to the Supine stem: as, occisus est, he was slain; monita erat, she had been warned.

28. PERSONAL ENDINGS.

The terminations of the persons are as follows : —

ACTIVE.		PASSIVE.
S. 1. m [o, i]	P. 1. mus	S. 1. r	P. 1. mur
2. s [sti]	2. tis	2. ris, re	2. mini
3. t	3. nt	3. tur	3. ntur

All Latin words in common use, ending in t, — except those in ot or ut; with at, but; et, and; dumtaxat, however; Moet, although, and indefinites in -libet, — are in the third person of verbs; all ending in nt are in the third person plural.

29. ESSE.

I. The Substantive Verb esse, to be, is thus inflected, having neither Gerund nor Supine, and only the Future Participle : —

PRINCIPAL PARTS: sum, I am; esse, to be; fui, I have been; futurus, about to be: — second stem, fu; third stem, füt.

II. Ābesse, to be absent, and ādesse, to be present, are inflected in the same way with esse. The Present Participle of abesse is absens; praesens is used as the participle of adesse. The Imperative is wanting in both.

III. Posse, to be able (pōtīs esse), is thus conjugated:—

	INDICATIVE.	SUBJUNCTIVE.
PRESENT, can .	possum	possim
	pōtēs	possis

IV. Prodesse, to help (pro esse), is conjugated like esse, retaining d when pro (prod) is followed by e: as, prosum, prodes, prodest, prosūmus, prodestis, prosumt.

30. CONJUGATION.

I. Verbs have four regular Conjugations, distinguished by the connecting vowel of the Present Infinitive: these are—

1. ā: as, vōc ā re, to call.
2. ē: as, mōn ē re, to warn.
3. ē: as, mitt ē re, to send.
4. ī: as, aud ī re, to hear.

II. The Perfect and Supine Stems are regularly formed by adding to the Present Stem, in the several conjugations, —

- (1.) āv, āt: as, vōco vōcāre vocāvi vocātum call.
- (2.) ēv, ēt: as, dēleo delēre delēvi delētum wipe out.
- (3.) a, t: as, carpo carpēre carpai carptum pluck.
- (4.) iv, it: as, audio audire audīvi audītum hear.

For full forms of Conjugation, see Tables.

In the second conjugation ēv, ēt, are usually modified into ū, It: as, mōneo, monēre, monui, monitum, warn.

III. The stem of the third conjugation usually ends in a consonant; this is combined with s in the same way as in nouns (§ 11, III. 1, 2, 3): as, rēgo, regēre, rexī, rectum, rule.

mitto, mittēre, misi, missum, send.

Vowel stems of the third conjugation end in i or u. Of the former, five simply lengthen the stem in the perfect: as, cāpio, cāpēre, cāpi, captum, take; fōdio, fōdi, foessum, dig.

But cūpio, cūpīvi, desire; -cūtio (quātio), -cussi, strike; -lūcio, -lexi, draw; pārio, pēpēri, produce; rāpio, rāpui, seize; sāpio, sāpīvi, taste; -spīcio, -spexi, view.

In these verbs, i is dropped when it would be followed by ē or i: as in cāpis, cāpit, cāpērem; but retained in the future cāpiet.

A stem ending in u (v) is unchanged in the perfect: as, ācuo, ācui, ācūtum, sharpen; volvo, volvi, vōlūtum, turn.

But fluo, flūxi, flow; struo, struxi, pile.

IV. The perfect stem is often formed by simply lengthening the stem-vowel: as,

(1.)	jūvo	juvāre	jūvi	jūtum	help .
(2.)	cleo	clēre	cīvi	cītum	rouse .
(3.)	fūgio	fugēre	fūgi	fugītum	flee .
(4.)	vēnio	venīre	vēni	ventum	come .

Or by reduplicating the stem (omitted in most compounds): as,

- (1.) do, dāre, dēdi, dātum, give (compounds usually in the third conjugation: as, addo, addēre, addīdi, addītum, add.)
- (2.) mordeo, mordēre, mōmordi, morsum, bite.
- (3.) curro, currere, cūcurri, cursum, run.

Or by analogy of other conjugations: as,

(1.)	sēco	secāre	secui	sectum	cut .
(2.)	māneo	manēre	mansi	mansum	wait .
(3.)	pēto	petēre	petivi	petitum	seek .
(4.)	vincio	vincēre	vinxi	vinctum	bind .

33. RULES OF CONJUGATION.

I. The Conjugations differ from one another only in the tenses formed upon the First or Present Stem.

All irregularities are either in the tenses derived from the first stem, or in the formation of the other stems; never in the terminations added to them.

The tenses formed upon the first stem in the active voice are also formed upon it in the passive.

Tenses of the second stem are inflected like the corresponding tenses of esse: as,

PERF. SING. vocavi, vocavisti, vocavit;

PLUR. vocavimus, vocavistis, vocavērunt or vocavēre.

II. In these inflections it will be observed, that —

1. The Imperfect Subjunctive is formed from the Present Infinitive by adding m; and the Pluperfect Subjunctive from the Perfect Infinitive in the same manner.

2. The passive tenses of the first stem are formed from the corresponding ones in the active, by changing m into r; or, where the active ends in o, by adding r.

3. The Imperative Passive is the same in form with the Present Infinitive Active.

III. 1. In tenses formed from the Second Stem, v between two vowels is often suppressed (syncopated), and the vowels in some cases made one; as amasse for amavisse, flestis for flevistis, audieram for audiveram. This takes place regularly in the compounds of eo, go (fourth conj.); as, abii for abivi, I went away.

So s, when it would be repeated: as, dixti for dixisti.

2. Four verbs, dico, duco, facio, and fero, with several of their compounds, drop the vowel-termination of the Imperative, making dīc, dūc, fāc, fēr: as, dīc mihi, tell me; aufer, take away. For the imperative of scio, know, scito is always used in the singular, and scitōte usually in the plural.

3. The following ancient forms are seldom found except in poetry: —

a. In the fourth conjugation, -ībām, -ībō, for -iēbām, -iam (fut.);

b. In the present subjunctive, -im: as in duim, perduim;

c. In the perfect subjunctive and future perfect, -so, -sim: as, faxo, faxim, from facio; habesso, from habeo.

d. In the passive infinitive, -ier; as āmārier for amāri.

34. FORMS OF CONJUGATION.

I. The principal parts of a verb, which determine its conjugation throughout, are the Present Indicative and Infinitive (first stem); the Perfect Indicative (second stem); and Supine (third stem): as, vōc o, vōc āre, vōcāv i, vōcāt um, call.

NOTE. — Few verbs have a Supine actually in use.

The Synopsis of a verb consists of the first person singular of each tense, arranged in regular order: as, of cōgo (con āgo), cogēre, coēgi, coactum: —

	Pres.	Imperf.	Fut.	Perf.	Plup.	Fut. Perf.
IND.	cōgo	cogēbam	cogam	coēgi	coegēram	coegēro
SUBJ.	cogam	cogērem		coegērim	coegissem
IMP.	coge	cogito	INF.	cogere, coegisse	coacturus esse
PARTS.	cogens	coacturus	coactus	cogendus

The synopsis may be given of any person: as, of the impersonal verb dēcet (3d person singular): —

IND.	decet	decēbat	decēbit	decuit	decuērat	decuērit
SUBJ.	deceat	-cēret	decuērit	-isset
			INF.	decēre	decuisse

II. In those tenses which are formed by uniting the verb esse, to be, with the participles of the verb (see §§ 27, VI. and 40), it is very common to omit est and esse: as, Allōbrōgibus sese vel persuāsūros [esse] existimābant, vel vi coactūros [esse]; they reckoned that they should either persuade the Allobroges or compel them. — Cæs. B. G. I. 6.

So when est or esse is used simply as a copula (§ 45 3); as, maximi risus, there was the greatest merriment. — Cic. Brut. 75.

Frequently the perfect participle is used as an adjective, with esse, and having the same form as a passive tense; as, lōcus qui nunc saeptus est, the place which is now enclosed. — Liv. I. 8. (saeptus est might also mean, was enclosed).

quo est dētestābilior istorum immānitas, qui lācērārunt omni scēlère patriam, et in eā fundītus dēlendā occūpāti sunt et fuērunt, hence the more hateful is the cruelty of those [authors of the civil war] who have rent their country with every crime, and are now and have been engaged in utterly ruining her. — Cic. Off. I. 17.

35. DEPONENT VERBS.

I. Deponent Verbs have the form of the Passive Voice, with an Active or Reflective signification (§ 30, II.): as,

1. mīror	mirāri	mirātus	admire.
2. mēreor	merēri	merītus	deserve.
3. sēquor	sequi	secūtus	follow.
4. pōtior	potīri	potītus	obtain.

1. These verbs have the Participles, Gerunds, and Supines of both voices; as, mirans, admiring; miraturus, about to admire; miratus, having admired; mirandus, to be admired (admirable).

2. The participle in du (gerundive) has necessarily a passive meaning, and hence is found only in transitive verbs, or of neuter verbs used impersonally (§ 39, 5): as, potienda est tellus, the land must be won.

pugnandum est nobis, we must fight.

oblītus meorum, obliuiscendus et illis, forgetting my friends, and sure to be forgotten by them.—Hor. Ep. I. 11, 9.

3. Most deponents are neuter or reflective in their meaning, corresponding to what in Greek verbs is called the Middle Voice.

4. More than half of all deponents are of the First Conjugation; and all of these are regular.

5. About twenty verbs of active signification are found in both active and passive forms: as, mēreo or mēreor, deserve.

6. Some deponents are occasionally used in a passive signification: as, crīmīnor, accuse; dignor, deem worthy; testor, testify.

7. The perfect participle of verbs otherwise deponent is often passive: as, mercātus, bought; ādeptus, obtained.

II. The verbs audeo, dare; fido, trust; gaudeo, rejoice; sōleo, be wont, have no second or Perfect stem, but form the Perfect, etc., after the analogy of the passive: as, ausus est, he dared; fisis sum, I trusted; gāvīsus est, he was glad; sōlīti sumus, we were accustomed. These are called Semi-Deponents (sometimes Neuter Passives).

1. From audeo we have an old subjunctive ausim. The form sōdes, an thou wilt (for si audes), is frequent in the dramatists.

2. The active forms vāpūlo, be flogged, and vēneo, be sold (vēnum eo, go for sale), have a passive meaning. They are sometimes called Neutral Passives.

36. DERIVATIVE VERBS.

I. INCHOATIVE OR INCEPTIVE VERBS are formed by adding the termination sco to the stem and connecting vowel of their primitives: as, from cāleo, I am warm, calesco, I grow warm. They are of the Third Conjugation, and are found only in the tenses of the First or Present Stem.

II. INTENSIVES are formed by adding the terminations of the first conjugation to the third stem of certain verbs: as, dicto, dictate, from dīco (dictum), say.

III. FREQUENTATIVES are formed by adding Itō to the first stem of verbs of the first conjugation, Itō or o to the third stem of those of the third, and inflecting as in the first: as, clāmItō, I keep shouting; dictItat, he keeps saying.

IV. DESIDERATIVES, expressing a wish, end in ūrīo, and are of the fourth conjugation: as, ēsūrīo (from ēdo, eat), I am hungry.

37. IRREGULAR VERBS.

[For esse and its derivatives see § 29.]

I. Vōlo, velle, volui, wish (no third stem).

IND. PR. vōlo vis vult vōlūmus vultis vōlunt.

SUBJ. PR. vēlim. IMPERF. vellem.

Other tenses are regular. There is no Imperative. The form sis for si vis, if you please, is often found after imperatives: as, cāve sis mentiaris, take care you don't lie. Cic. Mil. 22.

II. Nōlo (non volo), nolle, nolui, to be unwilling.

IND. PR. nōlo nonvis nonvult nōlūmus nonvultis nōlunt.

SUBJ. PR. nōlim. IMPERF. nolem.

IMPERATIVE. nōlī nolīto nolite nolitōte nolunto.

The rest regular. No third stem.

III. Mālo (māgis volo), malle, malui, prefer.

IND. PR. mālo māvīs māvult mālūmus māvultis mālunt.

SUBJ. PR. mālim. IMPERF. mallem.

The rest regular; no Imperative or third stem.

V. Ēdo, eat, is a regular verb of the third conjugation, with the following forms like those of esse:—

IND. PRES. ēs est estis. SUBJ. (PRES. edim). IMPERF. essem.
 IMPERAT. ēs esto estē estote. INFIN. esse.

VII. Fācio, facĕre, fĕci, factum, make, is inflected regularly in the Active; having also the peculiar forms fāxo (fut. perf.) and fāxim (subj. perf.). It has no Passive tenses formed upon the present stem, but uses instead fio, bē made, or become, which is inflected as a regular verb of the Fourth Conjugation, but has the infinitive fĭĕri and the subjunctive imperfect fĭĕrem: thus,—fio fĭĕri factus sum.

Compounds of facio with prepositions, change ā into ī in the first stem, and into e in the third, and form their passive regularly: as, conficio conficere confĕci confectum, finish.

Other compounds retain the a, and have fio in the Passive: as, ACT. bĕnĕ-facio, (-fā'cis), -fĕci, -factum. PASS. bĕnĕfio, benefĭt.

VIII. Queo, I can, and nequeo, I cannot, are conjugated like eo. They are rarely used except in the present: as, queo quis quit, quĭre, quĭvi.

38. DEFECTIVE VERBS.

I. Coepti, began; ōdi, hate; and mēmīni, remember, have no first stem. Incīpio, begin, is used as a present for coepti; odi and memini have a perfect stem only, with a present signification, and are hence called Preteritive Verbs. They are inflected regularly in the tenses derived from the second stem. Other parts of these verbs are —

1. Coeptus (used with the Passive Infinitive: as, urbs coepta est obsīdēri, the city began to be beset); coepturus, about to begin.

2. Osus osurus, both Active in their signification.

3. IMPERATIVE. memento mementōte, remember.

II. Aio, say, has the forms — ais ait aiunt, aiebam, &c.; aias aiat aiant, aiens.

III. Inquam, quoth I (used in quotations: as, inquit, quoth he), has the following forms: —

PR. IND. inquam inquis inquit inquimus inquitis inquiunt.

IMPERF. inquirebas. PERF. inquisti inquit.

FUT. inques inquiet. IMPERAT. inque inquito.

IV. Fāri, speak, forms the periphrastic tenses regularly: as, fātus sum, &c. It has also —

IND. PR. fātur. FUT. fābor, fabitur.

IMPERAT. fāre. INFIN. fāri. SUPINE. fātu.

Certain other forms occur in Compounds.

V. The following are found chiefly in the Imperative: —

1. salvē, salvēte, hail. (salveo.)

2. āvē, āvētē, āvēto, hail, or farewell. (aveo.)

3. cēdo, cette, give, tell. 4. āpāge, begone!

39. IMPERSONAL VERBS.

These are found only in the third person singular, without any personal subject, this being often supplied by an infinitive or other grammatical construction. The most usual verbs of this class are such as the following: —

1. Libet (lūbet), it pleases; licet, it is permitted, with infin. and dat.; dēcet, fit, oportet, must, with acc. (§ 70, III.): as, libet mihi lēgere, licet tibi lūdēre, I like to read, you may play. oportuit me ire, I had to go.

2. Miserēt, it grieves, pūdet, it shames, taedet, it wearies, pīget, it disgusts, with acc. of person and gen. of object: as, miseret me cāsus tui, I am sorry for your mishap. (§ 50, IV. 3.)

3. Accidit, it happens; restat, it remains; having a phrase or clause as subject: as, persaepe evēnit ut ūtilitas cum hōnestāte certet, it often happens that gain is at variance with honor. (§ 70, II.)

4. Pluit, it rains; ningit, it snows; grandīnat, it hails.

5. The passive of Neuter Verbs, or those governing the Dative: as, pugnātur, there is fighting; parcitur mihi, I am spared.

40. PERIPHRASTIC FORMS.

I. The participle in rus may be used with any mood or tense of sum, forming the Periphrastic Future Active: as, cum venturus sit, since he is about to come.

II. The participle in dus (Gerundive) may be used in the same way to denote duty or propriety: as, vēra dicenda sunt, the truth must be told.

So with the nominative of the Gerund: as, agītandumst vigilias, I must keep watch. — Plaut. Trin. 869.

NOTE. — The auxiliary verb (or copula) esse is often omitted in these periphrastic forms (see § 34).

41. ADVERBS.

I. Adverbs are regularly formed from adjectives of the first and second declensions by adding ē to the stem; from those of the third by adding ter or īter: as, cārus, dear, carē; sāpiens, wise, sapienter; brēvis, short, bre-viter; audax, bold, audāciter, or audacter.

The Comparative of an adverb thus formed is the neuter of the corresponding adjective; the superlative changes us of the adjective into ē: as, cārē, carius, carissimē, dearly.

 nūper, nuperrime, lately, just now.
 sapiēter, sapientius, sapientissimē, wisely.
 breviter, brevius, brevissimē, shortly.
 faciīter (or faciīlē), faciīus, faciīlimē, easily.
 bēnē (for bōnē), mēliū, optimē, well, better, best.
 mālē, pējus, pessimē, ill, worse, worst.

So compare the adverbs —

diu, diutius, diutissimē, long (in time).
 saepe, saepius, saepissimē, often.
 sātis, enough; satius, preferable.
 sēcus, sēcius, otherwise.

II. The following adverbs require special explanation : —

1. Etiam, also, is stronger than quōque, and precedes the emphatic word, while quōque follows it: as, terret etiam nos, ac mīnātur, us also he terrifies and threatens.

— Cic. Ros. Am. 40.

hoc quōque maleficiū, this crime likewise. — Id.

2. Nunc, now, points definitely to the present time; jam, already, has a reference to the past, and with negatives means no longer. A similar relation exists between tunc and tum: as, nunc jam aperte rempublicam pētis, now at last you openly attack the commonwealth. — Cic. Cat. I. 5.

— Id. II. 4.

nunc quīdem delēta est, tunc florēbat, now to be sure it [Greece] is destroyed, then it prospered. — Id. Ros. Am. 4.

tum, cum ex urbe Cātīlinam eiciēbam, at the time when I was engaged in expelling Catiline from the city. — Id. Cat. III. 2.

3. Certō means certainly; certē usually at any rate: as, certo scio, I know for a certainty. — Cic. de Senect. 1.

ōnēre aut jam urgentis aut certe adventantis sēnectūtis et te et me ipsum lēvāri vōlo, I wish both you and myself to be relieved of the weight of old age, which is either already pressing upon us, or at any rate approaching. — Id.

4. Primum, first, is usually followed by deinde, next, &c.; primo, at first, by postea or mox, afterwards: as, primum mihi videtur de genere belli, deinde de magnitudine, tum de imperatore deligendo esse dicendum, dissuadente primo Vercingetorige, post concedente, Vercingetorigis at first opposing, afterwards yielding. — Cæs. B.G. VII. 15.

I think I must speak first of the nature of the war, next of its magnitude, then of the choice of a commander. — Cic. de Leg. Man. 2.

5. With ne ... quidem, not even, the emphatic word stands between ne and quidem: as, ne omnis quidem causâ, not even for the sake of the omen. — Cic. Ros. Am. 48.

6. Two negatives make an affirmative, as in English.

42. PREPOSITIONS.

I. The following Prepositions are followed by the accusative:—

ad , to.	erga , towards.	post , after.
adversus , or	extra , outside.	praeter , beyond.
adversum , towards.	infra , below.	prope , near.
ante , before.	inter , among.	propter , on account of.
apud , at, near.	intra , inside.	secundum , next to.
circa , or	juxta , near.	supra , above.
circum , around.	ob , on account of.	trans , across.
circiter , about.	pene , in the power.	ultra , on the further side.
cis , citra , this side.	per , through.
contra , against.	pone , behind.

II. The following take the ablative:—

a , ab , abs , from, by.	e , ex , out of.
absque , but for, without.	prae , in comparison with.
cum , in presence of.	pro , in front of, for.
cum , with.	sine , without.
de , down from.	donec , up to, or as far as.

III. The following take the accusative or ablative:—

In, into, in; sub, under; subter, beneath; super, above. (§ 56, 1.)

In and sub, when followed by the accusative, signify motion to, when by the ablative, rest in, a place: as, in Itāliam vēnit, atque in Etruriā tres annos mănēbat, he came to Italy, and staid in Tuscany three years.
sub montem ivit, ibique sub arbore consēdit, he went to the foot of a hill, and sat down there under a tree.

IV. The following require special explanation:—

In, with the accusative, means into; ad, to (the neighborhood), is used especially for persons; ex (e), out of, is the reverse of in; ab (a), away from, is the reverse of ad; de, from, has reference to a part of the object: as, lēgātī in castrā vēniunt, the ambassadors come into the camp.—

Cic. Ros. Am. 9.

ut prōficiscantur ad L. Sullam, that they may go to Lucius Sulla.—Id.

e patrīmōniō nudum expūlistī, you cast him naked out of his inheritance.—Id. 50.

ab sē injūriam prōpulsārē, to ward off injury from himself.—Id.

nihil de patris fortūnis ad suam rem convertit, he has turned nothing to his own use from his father's fortunes.—Id. 49.

43. CONJUNCTIONS.

Conjunctions are more numerous, and their use is much more accurately distinguished, in Latin than in English. The following list includes those most important:—

1. Et, and, connects independent words or clauses; -que (enclitic), combines closely into one connected idea; atque (sometimes ac before consonants), adds with emphasis: as, frēmit mīles, et tribūnos centūriōnesque prōditiōnis arguit, the soldiers rave, and accuse the tribunes and centurions of treachery.—Tac. Hist. I. 80.

mănere ac dēprehendi, an fūgēre et dispergi pēriculōsius fōret, whether it were more dangerous to remain and be seized, or to fly and scatter.—Id. 81.

When the second member is negative, neque (nec) is used: as, rēdiērunt in castra invīti nēque innōcentes, they return into the camp unwilling and not innocent.—Id. 82.

2. Sed and vĕrum (more forcible), but, are used to contradict what precedes, — always after negatives; at, yet, to introduce with emphasis a new consideration, especially in argument; autem in the same way, especially in transitions, but with less force: as, non ad pŏpŭli Rŏmāni laudem, sed ad jŭdicum crudelitatem servatus, preserved, not for the praise of the Roman people, but the cruelty of the judges. — Cic. Verr. V. 1.

sit fur, sit sacrilĕgus; at est bŏnus impĕrator, grant he is a thief, a sacrilegious wretch, — for all that he is a good commander. — Id.

contāgio autem ista servilis belli cur abs te praedicātur? but why is that infection of servile war brought forward by you? — Id. 3.

non solum . . . verum etiam (a favorite expression of Cicero's), not only . . . but also. — Cic. Cat. I. 10.

3. Aut, or, excludes the alternative; vel (-vĕ) gives a choice; sivĕ (seu) is properly used in disjunctive conditions, but is also used with words, especially two names for the same object: as, tibi pŏtest illā aetas aut cālescĕre vel apricātiōne mĕlius vel igni, aut viciissim umbris āquisvĕ rĕfrigerari sālūbrius? where can that period of life either enjoy warmth better, whether by sunshine or by fire; or cool itself more healthfully, with shade or water? — Cic. de Senect. 16.

sive āmor sive āmicītia, whether love or friendship. — Cic. de Amic. 27.

4. Nam (namquĕ), for, introduces a sufficient cause; ĕnim (ĕtĕnim), an explanatory circumstance: as, id certe cālāmitātē docti mĕmōriā retinĕre dĕbĕmus. Nam tum, cum in Asia res magnas permulti āmisĕrant, scimus Romae sŏlŭtiōne impĕdita fidem concidisse. Non ĕnim possunt ũnā in civitāte multi rem ac fortūnas āmittere ut non plūres sĕcum in eamdem trahant cālāmitātem. This surely, taught by disaster, we ought to keep in memory. For when very many had lost great possessions in Asia, we know that at Rome credit fell by the stoppage of payments. For it is not possible that many lose their property and fortunes in one state without drawing more with them into the same calamity. — Cic. de Leg. Manil. 7.

5. Ergo, therefore, is used for things demonstrated; Itaque, in proofs from the nature of things; Igitur, then (a weak ergo), in passing from one stage of the argument to another; idcirco, for this reason, to call attention to a special argument: as, ergo idcirco turpis haec culpa est, quod duas res sanctissimas violat, therefore, for this reason, this is a base misdeed, because it violates two most holy things. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 39.

nec se comitem illius furoris sed ducem praebuit. Itaque hac amentia quaestione nova perterritus in Asiam profugit. Nulla est igitur excusatio peccati, si amici causam peccaveris, nor did he offer himself as an associate of this mad enterprise, but a leader. Therefore he fled to Asia, scared by a fresh accusation on account of this madness. It is then no excuse for a wrong, that you have done it for a friend. — Id. de Amic. 11.

6. Quia, because, regularly introduces a fact; quod, an allegation; quoniam, since, has reference to motives: as, illos quamquam sunt hostes, tamen, quia sunt cives, monitos volo, although they are enemies, still, because they are citizens, I wish them to be admonished. — Cic. Cat. II. 12.

quoniam nondum est perscriptum senatus consultum, ex memoria vobis quid senatus censuerit, exponam. Primum mihi gratiae aguntur, quod virtute, consilio, providentia mea res publica maximis periculis sit liberata, since the decree of the Senate has not yet been written out, I will recite to you from memory what the Senate voted. In the first place, thanks are rendered to me on the ground that, by my courage, judgment, and foresight, the commonwealth has been freed from the greatest peril. — Id. III. 6.

7. Quum (cum), when, is always a relative conjunction; quando is also used interrogatively: as, cum tacent, clamant, when they are silent, they cry out. — Cic. Cat. I. 8.

O rus, quando ego te adspiciam? O country, when shall I see thee? — Hor. Sat. II. 6, 60.

8. Et...et means both . . . and; tum . . . tum and (more commonly) cum . . . tum have the same meaning, but emphasize the second member: as, et privātim et publicē, both in private and in public. — Cic. Verr. V. 1.

tum dēprēcabitur a vōbis, tum etiam pro suo jūre contendet, he will not only entreat from you, but will claim as his right. — Id.

9. Atquē (ac) is used after words of similarity: as, rātio ordōque agmīnis āliŕ se hābēbat ac Belgae ad Nervios dētūlērānt, the arrangement and order of the army was otherwise than as the Belgians had reported to the Nervii. — Cæs. B.G. II. 19.

10. Autem, ōnim, vērō always stand second or third in the clause; the same is generally true of īgitur, and often of tāmen. — See 2, 4, 5.

11. The same fondness for connecting one sentence closely with the preceding which caused the use of relatives at the commencement of a sentence (§ 43, iv.), led to the employment of namque, etēnim, neque, &c., in the same place: as, namque me lūpus fūgit īnermem, for a wolf fled from me, although unarmed. — Hor. Carm. I. 22, 9.

44. FORMATION OF WORDS.

I. NOUNS DERIVED FROM NOUNS.

1. Those ending in um or etum signify a collection or group: as, arboretum, grove; arbustum, vineyard (arbor).

2. Diminutives usually end in ŭlus or ŭlus, often with the feminine and neuter terminations: as, filiŭlus, little son (filius); arbuscula, shrub (arbor); currŭculum, little car (currus), or race-course.

3. Patronymics generally end in ādes or īdes (F. as, is): as, Aeneādes, son of Aeneas (plural, companions); Peleīdes (contr. Pelides) son of Peleus; Tyndāria, daughter of Tyndarus.

II. NOUNS DERIVED FROM ADJECTIVES.

Nouns derived from Adjectives have the termination ia, itas, or tūdo: as, brēvitas, shortness (brēvis); audācia, boldness (audax); mag-nitūdo, greatness (magnus).

III. NOUNS DERIVED FROM VERBS.

1. Nouns formed by adding or (fem. rix) to the supine stem, denote the person who does the action: as, victor, victrix, conqueror (vinco).

2. Those formed by adding io or us (fourth dec.) to the supine stem, express abstractly the idea of the verb: as, mōtio or mōtus, movement (mōveo).

3. Those formed by adding men or mentum to the present stem, indicate the subject, object, or means of the action: as, flūmen, stream or river (fluo); dōcūmentum, proof (doceo).

IV. ADJECTIVES DERIVED FROM NOUNS.

1. The ending eus or āceus denotes material: as, aureus, golden (aurum); chartāceus, of paper (charta).

2. The endings icus and ilis denote belonging to: as, civīcus and civīlis, belonging to a citizen (civis).

3. The terminations ōsus and lentus indicate fulness: as, cōpiōsus, abundant (copia); opūlentus, wealthy (ōpes).

4. Many in tus are formed like participles: as, aurātus, gilded (aurum); auritus, long-eared (auris); cornūtus, horned (cornu).

5. Adjectives from proper names end in ānus: as, Pompēianus, of Pompey; Rōmanus, Roman.

6. From names of places are also adjectives in ensis, icus, and as (gen. ātis): as, Cannensis, of Cannæ; Pharsālīcus, of Pharsalus; Arpīnas, of Arpinum (gen. pl. -atium).

V. ADJECTIVES DERIVED FROM VERBS.

1. Verbal adjectives in bundus (chiefly from verbs of the first conjugation) imply condition or act: as, errābundus, apt to stray (erro); moribundus, at the point of death (mōrior); vitābundus, avoiding (with acc.).

2. Those in idus (chiefly from neuter verbs), denote quality: as, cālidus, warm (cāleo); callidus, cunning (calleo); lūcidus, bright (lūceo).

3. Those in ax, denote a propensity or active quality: as, audax, bold (audeo); pugnax, full of fight (pugno).

4. Those in ilis and bilis, denote possibility or aptness: as, frāgilis, frail (frango); amābilis, lovely (āmo).

VI. COMPOUND NOUNS.

Examples of these are — patrīcīda, one who kills his father (pāter, caedo).

tubīcen, trumpeter (tūba, cāno).

tibīcen, piper (tibia, cāno).

armīger, armor-bearer (arma, gēro).

signīfer, standard-bearer (signum, fēro).

pontīfex, priest, (bridge-maker, pons, fācio).

auceps, bird-catcher (āvis, cāpio).

There are numerous other derivative forms, but the above are those which occur most frequently.

Many words are sometimes classed as Derivatives, which are formed by simply adding the termination of the noun, adjective, or verb, to the same root or stem: as, from rēg- rule, are formed rēg o, I govern or direct; rex (gen. rēgis), king; rēgīna, queen; rēgālis, rēgius, royal; regnum, royalty; rēgio, district under a common rule, or lying in a given range.

PART SECOND.

USE OF WORDS. (SYNTAX.)

45. DEFINITIONS.

1. The Subject of a proposition is the person or thing spoken of ; the Predicate is that which is stated of the Subject.

2. A word is said to Agree with another, when it is in a corresponding grammatical form ; it is said to Govern another, when it requires it to be in a particular Case.

The word so governed is called the Object.

3. The verb esse, to be, when it connects an attribute with its subject, is called the Copula ; otherwise, it is called the Substantive Verb.

I. RULES OF AGREEMENT.

46. OF NOUNS.

A Noun used to describe another agrees with it in Case ; this is called Apposition : as, externus timor, maximum concordiae vinculum, fear of the foreigner, the strongest bond of union. — Liv. II. 39.

quattuor hic, primum omen, equos vidi, I saw here four horses, the first omen. — Virg. Æn. III. 537.

Ancum Marcium regem populus creavit, the people made Ancus Marcius king. — Liv. I. 32.

consules creantur Cæsar et Servilius, Cæsar and Servilius are made consuls. — Cæsar B.C. III. 1. (consules in the predicate nominative, after the passive creantur.)

littēras Graecas sēnex dīdici, I learned Greek letters when an old man (senex in appos. with ego understood).

Aristaeus qui olivae dicitur inventor, Aristaeus, who is called the discoverer of the olive. — Cic. N. D. III. 18.

1. Also in Gender when it can: as, oleae Minerva inventrix, Minerva the discoverer of the olive. — Virg. G. I. 18.

2. A Noun in apposition with the locative case is put in the ablative with or without the preposition in (§ 55, III. 3): as, mīlites Albae constitērunt in urbe mūnita, the soldiers halted at Alba, a fortified town. — Id. Phil. IV. 2.
Antiochiae, cēlēbri quondam urbe et cōpiōsa, at Antioch, once a famous and wealthy city. — Cic. pro Arch. 3.

3. The genitive is used in apposition with possessive pronouns, taking the gender and number of the implied subject: as, in nostro omnium flētu, amid the tears of us all. — Cic. pro Mil. 34.

47. OF ADJECTIVES.

Adjectives, also Adjective Pronouns and Participles, agree with their nouns in gender, number, and case: as, consulāria mūnēra, the consular duties; hac lēge, by this law; ūno interfecto, one being slain.

I. With two or more nouns the adjective is plural: as, Nisus et Euryālus primi, Nisus and Euryalus first. — Virg. Æn. V. 394.

II. With nouns of different genders it either (1) agrees with the nearest: as, si res, si vir, si tempus ullum dignum fuit, if any thing, if any man, if any time, was fit. — Cic. pro Mil. 7.

Or (2) it may be masculine, if they are living beings, neuter if things without life: as,

uxor deinde ac libēri amplexi, then his wife and children embraced him. — Id. II. 40.

An adjective (masc. or fem.) may refer to a noun of different gender, when the existence of persons is implied: as, cōlōniae aliquot dēductae, Prisci Latīni appellāti, colonies were established [of men] called Prisci Latini. — Liv. I. 3.

pars certare pārati, a part ready to contend. — Virg. Æn. V. 108.

magna pars raptae, most of the women were seized. — Liv. I. 9.

This is called Synesis, or constructio ad sensum.

III. Adjectives are often used as nouns, meaning persons or things: as, dīdicit jam dīves āvārus laudāre dīsertos, the rich miser has already learned to compliment the eloquent. — Juv. VII. 30.

So, constantly, are the possessive pronouns, in military or other special use: as, suos continebat, he held his men in check. — Cæs. B.G. I. 15.

So a noun is sometimes used as an adjective or qualified by an adverb: as, admōdum puer, quite a boy; māgis vīr, more of a man; fautor ineptē, a stupid admirer. — Hor. Sat. I. 10, 2.

IV. A neuter adjective is used as a noun (1) to denote the abstract quality, or (pl.) things in general; as, tanta vis est hōnesti, ut spēcīem ūtīlītatis obscūret, so great is the force of honor, that it dims the show of gain. — Cic. de Off. III. 11.

But where the meaning would be doubtful, the feminine is used with res. Hence adjectives of the third declension are thus used rarely except in the nom. and acc.: as, lōquītur de omnibus rēbus (not de omnibus), he talks about every thing; but omnia mihi dixit, he told me every thing.

(2) In apposition with a noun of different gender: as, vārium et mūtābile semper femīna, woman, ever fickle and changeful. — Virg. Æn. IV. 569.

(3) In apposition with an infinitive clause or phrase : as, aliud est errāre Caesārem nolle, aliud nolle misēreri, it is one thing to be unwilling that Cæsar should err, another to be unwilling that he should pity. — Cic. pro Lig. 5.

V. Adjectives (especially those formed from proper names), as well as the possessive pronouns, are often used instead of a genitive : as, acies Pompēiāna, Pompey's line of battle. — Cæs. B.C. III. 94.

video hērilem filium, I spy master's son. — Ter. Eun. II. 2.

The possessive is regularly used instead of the genitive of possession of the personal pronouns : as, domus mea, my house.

An adjective pronoun sometimes agrees in gender with a word in apposition, rather than with that to which it refers : as, eam sapientiam interprētantur, quam adhuc mortālis nemo est consecutus (for id . . . quod), they explain that to be wisdom, which no man ever yet attained. — Cic. de Amic. V.

VI. An adjective in Latin is sometimes best rendered by other forms in English : as, te quam laetus inviso, how joyfully I visit thee. — Catull. 31, 4.

primus vēnit, he was the first to come.
eos se invito adesse dixit, he said they were there against his will.

VII. When two qualities of an object are compared, both adjectives are usually in the comparative : as, longior quam lātior acies erat, the line was longer than it was broad. — Liv. XXVII. 48.

VIII. Superlatives denoting order and succession, also mēdius, midst, cētērus, other, rēliq̄us, remaining, are used to designate a part : as, in colle mēdio, on the middle of the hill. — Cæs. B.G. I. 24.

summus mons, the top of the height. — Id. 22.

So, sērā nocte, late at night.

IX. Alius . . . alius, one . . . another, implies that the predicate is differently applied in each case : as, duo rēges ālius alia viā oīvitatem auxērunt, two kings enlarged the state, each in his own way. — Liv. I. 21.

48. OF RELATIVES.

Relatives serve (1) as nouns in the subordinate clause in which they stand; (2) as connectives, relating directly to some word in the main proposition, which is called the Antecedent.

The use of relatives is much more frequent in Latin than it is in English, owing to the fondness of the ancients for connecting a sentence very closely to the preceding. (See § 43, 11.)

I. Relatives agree with their antecedents in gender, number, and person, their case depending on the construction of the clause in which they stand: as, utrum ille qui postulat ad tantum bellum legatum quem velit idoneus non est qui impetret? is not he who claims for such a war the deputy whom he will, fit to get him? — Cic. pro Lege Manil. 19.

adsum qui feci, here am I who did it. — Æn. IX. 427.

II. The relative often agrees in gender with the noun (appositive) in its own clause rather than with the antecedent: as, mare etiam quem Neptunum esse dicebas, the sea, too, which you said was Neptune. — Cic. N. D. III. 20.

III. The antecedent is often repeated in the relative clause: as, loci natura erat haec quem locum nostri castris delegerant, the nature of the ground which our men had chosen for the camp was this. — Cæs. B. G. II. 18.

Sometimes it is omitted: as, qui arma capere potuerunt, restiterunt, those who could take arms held their ground. — Cæs. B. G. IV. 14.

qui cognoscere misit, he sent men to reconnoitre. — Id. I. 21.

Sometimes it stands only in the relative clause: as, quas res in consilatu nostro gessimus attigit hic versibus, he has touched in verse the things which we did in our consulship. — Cic. Arch. 11.

In such cases, the demonstrative is or hic usually stands in the principal clause : as, quae pars civitatis calamitatem populo Romano intulerat ea princeps poenas persolvit, that part of the state which had brought disaster on the Roman people was the first to pay the penalty. — Cæs. B.G. I. 12.

In a sentence of this class, the relative clause in Latin generally stands first; but in translating, the noun should be transferred, in its proper case, to the antecedent clause, as in the example just quoted.

IV. A relative often stands at the beginning of a clause or sentence where in English a demonstrative must be used : as, quorum quod simile factum? what ever happened like this?

— Cic. Cat. IV. 8.

quod si facit — quam impudentiam est — eumne testem improbabat quem iudicem probavit? If he does this — and he is shameless enough for it — will he challenge one as witness whom he has approved as juror? — Cic. Ros. Com. 15.

V. Id quod or quae res is used instead of quod to relate to an idea or group of words previously expressed : as, [obtrectatum est] Gabinio dicam, an Pompeio? an utrique — id quod est verius? [insult has been offered] shall I say to Gabinius, or Pompey? or to both, which is nearer the truth? — Cic. de Leg. Manil. 19.

49. VERBS.

Verbs agree with their subject in person and number; in gender also in the periphrastic forms : as, ego statuo, I resolve; oratio est habita, the plea was spoken.

I. With two or more singular subjects the verb will be in the plural; and if they are of different persons, it will be in the first rather than the second, or the second than the third : as, si tu et Tullia valētis, ego et Cicero valemus, if you and Tullia are well, I and Cicero are well. — Cic. Fam. XIV. 5.

But the verb will be singular if the subjects are considered as one whole : as,

haec tua justitia et lenitas animi florescit quotidie magis, this justice and gentleness of yours flowers daily more and more. — Cic. pro Marc. 4.

So, too, if they are joined by disjunctives : as, neque fides neque iurandum neque illum misericordia repressit, not faith, nor oath, nor mercy, checked him. — Ter. Ad. III. 2, 8.

A collective noun may in poetry take a plural verb : as, quaerunt pars aditum, a part seek the entrance. — Æn. IX. 507.

Also such singulars as quisque, every ; uterque, each.

II. The personal pronoun, as subject, is usually omitted, unless emphatic : as, loquor = I speak ; egō loquor, = it is I that speak.

So an indefinite subject : as, fērunt, they say.

III. The infinitive is sometimes used instead of the personal form in narrative ; this is called the Historical Infinitive : as, tum Catilina polliceri tabulas novas, then Catiline promised an abolition of debts. — Sallust, Cat. 21.

 — Cic. in Verr. II. 77.

II. RULES OF GOVERNMENT.

50. GENITIVE.

The Genitive, in its primary meaning, denotes Origin or Possession. It is used —

I. To define more precisely the meaning of a noun (SUBJECTIVE GENITIVE) : as, pōtentia Pompēi formidolosa erat, the power of Pompey was alarming. — Sall. Cat. 19.

The limiting genitive frequently stands in the predicate : as, altērum gēnus est eorum qui rērum pōtīri vōlunt, a second class consists of the would-be masters of affairs. — Cic. Cat. II. 8.

1. A phrase or clause with esse, to be, is often limited by the genitive; most frequently the genitive of adjectives and abstract nouns: as, neque sui iudicii [esse] discernere, it was not for his judgment to decide. — Cæs. B.C. I. 35.

— Ov. Met. IV. 115. (Compare § 73, 1.)

The genitive used in this way often takes the place of a neuter adjective: as, sapientis est (not sapiens est), it is wise.

Instead of the genitive of personal pronouns, the neuter of the possessive is used: as, mentiri non est meum, it is not for me to lie. — Ter. Heaut. II. 2.

2. The genitive of quality requires an adjective: as, vir summae honestatis, a man of the highest honor.

The ablative is also used in this way: as, vir summo consilio, a man of the highest prudence. (§ 54, II.)

3. The genitive is sometimes used instead of a noun in apposition; as, nomen insaniae, the word insanity. — Cic. Tusc. III. 4.

4. A genitive of specification, after adjectives, is common in the poets and late prose writers: as, integer vitae scelerisque purus, upright of life and clear of guilt. — Hor. Od. I. 22, 1.

II. To denote the Whole, after words signifying a Part (PARTITIVE GENITIVE). These are —

1. Nouns or Pronouns: as, pars militum, part of the soldiers; quis nostrum? which of us?

2. Numerals, Comparatives, and Superlatives: as, alter consulum, one of the (two) consuls.

plurimum totius Galliae equitatu valet, is strongest in cavalry of all Gaul. — Caes. B.G. V. 3.

3. Neuter Adjectives and Pronouns: as, tantum spatii, so much space; aliquid nummorum, a few pence;

plana urbis, the level parts of the town.

4. Adverbs, especially of Place and Quantity: as, sātīs pēcūniae, enough money; ubīnam gentium sumus? where in the world are we? inde loci, next in order.

Instead of the Partitive Genitive, ex with the ablative is often used: as,

ūnus ex tribūnis, one of the tribunes.

III. To denote the object of some action implied by the governing word (OBJECTIVE GENITIVE). Words of this class are —

1. Nouns expressing action or mental emotion: as, grātia bēnēficii, gratitude for a favor.

laudator temporis acti, one who praises the past. — Hor. de Arte Poetica, 173.

injuria mulierum Sabīnarum, the wrong done the Sabine women.
mēmōria nostri tua, your memory of us. — Cic. Fam. XII. 17.
vim suorum pro suo pericūlo dēfendebant, they parried the attack on their comrades as if it were their own peril. —
 Cæs. B.C. III. 110.

So, rarely, with the possessive pronouns: as, pericūlo invidiæ meæ, with risk of odium against me. — Cic.
 Cat. II. 2.

2. Adjectives of Fulness or Want, and those expressing feeling or desire; also (frequently) similis, like: as, sermonis plēnus orātor, a speaker full of words. — Cic. Brut. 68.
erat plēna lictōrum et impēriōrum prōvincia, the province was full of lictors and officials. — Cæs. B.C. III. 32.

Cethēgus qui dixisset se semper bōnorum ferrāmentorum studiōsum fuisse, Cethegus, who had said that he had always been a fancier of good cutlery. — Cic. Cat. III. 5.

3. Verbal Adjectives, especially with the terminations ax and ns: as,

erat in oppīdo multitūdo insōlens belli, there was in the town a population unused to war. — Cæs. B.C. II. 36.

hābetis dūcem mēmōrem vestri oblītum sui, you have a leader who thinks of you and forgets himself. — Cic. Cat. IV. 9.

justum ac tēnācem prōpōsiti vīrum, a man just and steadfast to his purpose. — Hor. Od. III. 3, 1.

4. Several adjectives which also govern the dative; especially similis, like; par, aequalis, equal; communis common to; as, proprium senectutis, peculiar to old age. — Cic. Sen. 11.

The relation of the Objective Genitive may also be expressed by prepositions: as, odium in Caesarem, hatred of Caesar, (or, odium Caesaris).

IV. As the object of the following classes of verbs: —

1. Of remembering, forgetting, and reminding, — when used generally, to denote the subject on which the mind is exercised: as, obliviscere caedis atque incendiorum, turn your mind from slaughter and conflagrations. — Cic. Cat. I. 3.

But the accusative must be used with these verbs to express a particular thing remembered or forgotten: as, hoc te admoneo, I remind you of this.

2. Of accusing, condemning, and acquitting, to express the charge, and sometimes the penalty: as,

C. Marium sceleris ac parricidii nefarii mortuum condemnabimus? shall we convict Caius Marius, now dead, of crime and infamous treason? — Cic. pro Rabir. 10.

C. Gracchum capitis damnaverunt, they condemned Caius Gracchus to death.

The crime may be expressed by the ablative with de; the punishment by the ablative alone: as, de ambitu condemnatos, convicted of bribery. — Suet. Jul. 41.

vitia autem hominum atque fraudes damnis, ignominia, vinculis, verbis, exiliis, morte, damnantur, while the vices and crimes of men are punished with fines, dishonor, chains, scourgings, exile, death. — Cic. de Or. I. 43.

3. Misereor, miseresco, pity: also, the Impersonals misereor, pity; piget, disgust; poenitet, repent; pudet, shame; taedet or pertaesum est, weary, with the accusative of the person affected (§ 39, 2): as, me meorum factorum atque consiliorum numquam poenitebit, I shall never repent of my acts and counsels. — Cic. Cat. IV. 10.

4. Intērest and rēfert, it concerns, — the subject of the verb being a neuter pronoun, an infinitive clause, or the subjunctive with ut: as, omnem pōtentiam ad ūnum conferri pācis interfuit, it was the interest of peace that all power should be put in one man's hands. — Tac. Hist. I. 1.

Instead of the genitive of the personal pronoun, the possessive is used in this construction, in the abl. sing. fem.: as, quid id rēfert tuā? how does it concern you? — Plaut. Rud. 178.

Rēfert is rarely used in any other way.

NOTE. — Intērest is used in the three following ways: —

- (1.) Impersonally, with the genitive: as, intērest exercītūs, it is for the advantage of the army;
- (2.) Personally, with the dative: as, intērest exercītui, he is present with the army;
- (3.) With the accusative and prepositions: as, intērest inter exercītum et castra, either, he is between — or, there is a difference between — the army and camp.

5. Some verbs of plenty and want, separation and emotion: as, quid est quod dēfensiōnis indīgeat? what is there that needs defence? — Cic. Ros. Am. 12.

6. Also, sometimes, pōtior, get possession of; as always in the expression pōtiri rērum, to be masters of affairs. — Cic. Fam. I. 8.

The Genitive is also used after the adverbs prīdiē, the day before; postrīdiē, the day after (compare § 56, II. 1): as, postridie ejus diēi, the next day. — Cæs. B.G. II. 12.

NOTE. — For the Genitive of Price, see § 54, IX.

51. DATIVE.

The dative (TO or FOR) denotes the person or thing whose interest is affected. It is used —

I. With words expressing likeness, fitness, nearness, and the like: as, sīmīlis patri, like his father; prōfuit āmicis, he helped his friends.

So after misceo, mix; idem, same, and many other words, especially in the poets, and in imitation of Greek usage.

With some adjectives of this class prepositions may also be used: as, aptus ad rem militārem, fit for military service.

si iniquus es in me iūdex, if you are an unfair judge towards me. — Cic. Fam. II. 1.

When the dative is required by the structure of the sentence as a whole, rather than by any single word, it is called the dative of advantage and disadvantage (dativus commōdi et incommodi): as, sine dote posco tuam sororem filio, I ask your sister for my son without a dowry. — Plaut. Trin. II. 4, 98.

laudavit mihi frārem, he praised my brother (out of regard for me: laudavit fratrem meum would imply no such motive).

Othōni in Hispaniam cōmes, a companion of Otho's into Spain. — Tac. Hist. I. 22.

To signify in defence of, pro must be used: as, pro patriā mori, to die for one's country. — Hor. Carm. III. 2, 13.

Mihi, tibi, nobis, and vobis are used in questions and expressions of wonder and praise, to denote a certain interest felt: as, quid mihi Celsus agit? pray, what is Celsus about? — Hor. Ep. I. 3, 15. This is called the Ethical Dative (dativus ethicus).

II. As the indirect object of transitive verbs which take the accusative of the direct object: as, hunc librum tibi mitto, I send you this book.

NOTE. — Motion is always expressed in prose by in or ad with the accusative; but the poets sometimes use the dative: as, dum inferret deos Latio, until he brought the gods to Latium. — Virg. Æn. I. 5.

A few verbs of this class, as dōno, present, induo, clothe, circumdo, surround, may also take the accusative and ablative: as, donat cōrōnas militibus, he gives wreaths to the soldiers; or, donat milites cōrōnis, he presents the soldiers with wreaths.

III. With many verbs (transitive in English) which signify favor, obedience, command, pardon, envy, and the like: as, cur mihi invidēs? why do you envy me? civitatī serviebat, he served the state.

So with adjectives or nouns derived from such verbs ; as, invidia mihi, envy towards me ; credulus illis, trusting them.

These verbs can be used in the passive only impersonally, in which case the dative may be retained : as,

cui parci pōtuit ? who could be spared ? — Liv. XXI. 14. (§ 73, 1.)

For the dative with other Impersonals, see § 39, 1.

Sometimes the accusative of the thing is used with the dative of the person after such verbs as impēro, command or require ; invideo, envy or grudge ; aequo, make equal ; minor, threaten ; cēdo, yield ; suadeo, urge : as, impērat oppidānis dēcem tālenta, he exacts ten talents of the townspeople.

IV. With many verbs usually governing the accusative when advantage or disadvantage is implied : thus, consūlo, with acc. consult, with dat. consult one's interest ; convēnio, with acc. meet, with dat. suit ; mētuo, timeo, with acc. fear, with dat. be apprehensive for ; mōdēror, tempēro, with acc. arrange, with dat. control. So cāveo, beware, prospicio, foresee, and others.

Mēdeor, mēdīco, heal ; praestōlor, wait ; and ausculto, hearken, may take either dative or accusative.

V. After many verbs compounded with the following prepositions, and retaining their force in the compound : ad, ante, con, in, inter, ob, post, prae, pro, re (insep.) sub, and super : as, omnibus interfui proeliis, I took part in all the battles. — Cæs. B.C. III. 87.

hibernis Labiēnum praepōsuit, he placed Labienus in charge of the winter-quarters. — Cæs. B.G. I. 54.

Also active compounds of circum, de, ab, ex : as, classe Caesāri ēreptā, the fleet being snatched away from Caesar.
 — Cæs. B.C. III. 111.

But when there is a distinct indication of place, the preposition is repeated : as, dētrahēre ānūlum de dīgito, to withdraw a ring from the finger.

VI. After esse, to be, denoting the possessor : as, est mihi liber, I have a book.
erat Dario mīte et tractābile ingēnium, Darius had a gentle and yielding temper. — Curt. III. 2.

This is the usual form to denote possession ; habeo, I have, generally signifying rather, I hold. After nōmen est and similar expressions, the name is usually in the dative by attraction : as, nam mī est Auxilio nomen, for my name is Help. — Pl. Cist. I. 3.

VII. To signify the purpose or end, frequently joined with another dative of the person : as, tertiā āciem nostris subsidio mīsit, he sent the third line as a relief to our men. — Cæs. B.G. I. 52.
tum sunt carmina cordi, then songs are a delight. — Lucr. V. 1389.

VIII. After the gerundive, to denote the person to whom the necessity exists : as, haec vobis provincia est defendenda, this province is for you to defend [to be defended by you]. — Cic. Leg. Man. 6, 14.

Often, also, with perfect participles ; with vidēri, seem ; and, in the poets and later writers, with almost any passive verb : as, nulla tuarum audita mihi neque visa sororum, no one of thy sisters has been either heard or seen by me. — Virg. Æn. I. 326.

52. ACCUSATIVE.

The Accusative is the case of the direct object. It is used —

I. After transitive verbs : as, lēgatiōnem suscepit, he undertook the embassy. — Cæs. B.G. I. 3.

Many neuter verbs are sometimes used transitively : as, meum cāsum luctumque doliērunt, they have bewailed my misfortune and grief. — Cic. Sest. 69, 145.

Titius, Pindārici fontis qui non expalluit haustus, Titius, who did not turn pale at draughts of the Pindaric fount. — Hor. Ep. I. 3, 10.

So occasionally in the passive: as, ridētur ab omni conventu, he is laughed at by the whole assembly. — Hor. Sat. I. 7, 22.

This occurs especially with verbs of tasting, smelling, &c: as, Epīcūrus, hōmo mīnime rēsāpiens patriam, Epicurus, a man who smacked very little [i.e. possessed very little of the characteristic wit] of his native country. — Cic. N.D. II. 17.

Also with accusatives of meaning cognate to that of the verb: as, vīvēre eam vītā, to live that kind of life. — Cic. de Sen. 21.

II. After many neuter verbs, which become active when compounded with prepositions. These include —

1. Verbs of motion: as, dālūbra deum ādībīs, thou wilt visit the shrines of the gods. — Lucr. VI. 75.

2. Compounds of circum and some other prepositions: as, cīves qui circumstant sēnātum, the citizens who throng about the Senate. — Cic. Cat. I. 8.

III. As a secondary object (1) after verbs of asking and teaching; also cēlo, hide: as, hoc vos dōceo, I teach you this. — Cic. de Orat. II. 47.

nihil suprā deos lācesso, nec pōtentem āmicum largiōra flāgīto, I do not importune the gods for any thing more, nor do I demand more liberal gifts from a powerful friend. — Hor. Carm. II. 18, 11.

So with passives: as,

Cāto, rōgātus sententiam, ōrātiōnem hābuit, Cato, being asked his opinion, delivered a speech. — Sall. Cat. 52.

The ablative with a preposition is often used after these verbs: always, to express the person, after pōto, postūlo, and quaero: as, pācem ab Rōmānis pētiērunt, they begged peace from the Romans. — Cæs. B.G. II. 13.

(2) After many active verbs compounded with prepositions: as, Hibērum cōpiās trajēcit, he threw his forces across the Iber. — Liv. XXI. 23.

(3) In Apposition after verbs of choosing, &c. (See § 46.)

IV. In neuter pronouns and adjectives of number (in an adverbial sense), especially with neuter verbs : as, quidve mōror, or why do I delay? — Virg. Æn. II. 101.
pauca milītes hortātus, having briefly exhorted the soldiers. — Sall. Jug. 49.

So id tempōris, at this time. — Cic. Cat. I. 4, 10.

Similar to this is the so-called Synecdochical or Greek Accusative, used by the poets to denote the part affected : as, flāvāque cāput nectentur olīvā, and their heads shall be wreathed with yellow olive. — Virg. Æn. V. 309.

So with the passive (used reflectively) of cingo and similar verbs : as,

Inūtile ferrum cingitur, he girds on his useless sword. — Virg. Æn. II. 510.

V. In exclamations : as,

O fortunātam rempublicam! O fortunate republic! — Cic. Cat. II. 4.

VI. As subject of the infinitive in dependent clauses, after verbs of knowing, thinking, hearing, wishing, and telling (verba sentiendi et declarandi).

See, for examples of this use, Oratio Obliqua (§ 67, I. 2), and Substantive Clauses (§ 70, III.).

NOTE. — For the accusatives of time and place, see § 55. — For the accusative after prepositions, see § 56.

53. VOCATIVE.

The Vocative is used in direct address : as,

Septīmi, Gādes adiūtūre mēcum, Septimius, who art ready to go with me to Gades. — Hor. Carm. II. 6, 1.

Sometimes the nominative is used instead : as, almae filius Maiae, O son of benignant Maia. — Hor. Carm. I. 2, 43.

audi, tu pōpulus Albānus, hear, thou people of Alba. — Liv. I. 24.

54. ABLATIVE.

The Ablative, in general, implies either instrument or separation. It is used —

I. To express cause, means, and specification: as, vultu Milōnis perterritus, scared by the countenance of Milo.

— Cic. Mil. 15, 41.

nec tantum Phoebo gaudet Parnasiā rūpēs, nor does the cliff of Parnassus delight so much in Phoebus. — Virg. Buc. VI. 29.

ferro rumpenda per hostes est via, a road must be cut through the enemy with the sword. — Id. Æn. X. 371.

suo jūre noster ille Ennius sanctos appellat poētas, with peculiar right our Ennius calls poets holy. — Cic. Arch. 8.

certē non tulit ullos haec civitas aut glōriā clārīōres, aut auctōritāte grāviōres, aut hūmānitāte pōlitiōres, certainly this city never produced any more illustrious in glory, or weighty in authority, or refined in culture. — Cic. de Orat. II. 37.

The motive which influences the mind of the person acting is expressed by the ablative alone; the object exciting the emotion requires ob or propter with the accusative: as, nōn ob praedam aut spōliandi cūpīdīne, not for booty, or through the desire of plundering. — Tac. Hist. I. 63.

So causā and grātiā after a genitive, or causā with a possessive: as, legātōs ad Caesārem sui purgandī grātiā mittunt, they send deputies to Caesar for the purpose of clearing themselves.

— Cæs. B.G. VII. 43.

meā causā, for my sake. — Ter. Eun. V. 8, 40 (1070).

With living beings, instrumentality is expressed by per, or by ōpērā with a genitive or possessive: as, pēr Antiōchum, by the aid of Antiochus. — Liv. XXXIII. 18.

meā ōpērā, by my aid. — Cic. de Sen. 4. So per vim (as well as the ablative vi), by force. — Cæs. B.G. I. 14.

NOTE. — For the ablative of crime and penalty, see § 50, iv. 2.

II. With an adjective or a limiting genitive, to denote manner and quality: as, pōptūlus magnā vōce me vēre jūrassē jūrāvit, the people swore with a loud voice that I had sworn truly. — Cic. Fam. V. 2.

mōre hōmīnum invidēt, after the manner of men they envy. — Cic. pro Balbo, 26.

ānīmo mēliōre sunt quam pars patrīciōrum, they are better disposed than a portion of the patricians. — Cic. Cat. II. 12.

hōmīnis esse spēcīe deos confitendū est, we must admit that the gods are of human form. — Cic. N.D. I. 18.

Manner is also expressed by cum, and in a few cases by the ablative alone: as, mīnus cum cūrā, less carefully. — Plant. M.G. III. 1, 6.

hōc ōnus fēram stūdio ēt industriā, I will bear this burden zealously and diligently. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 4.

Accompaniment properly requires cum: as, nestri cum fundītōribus sāgittāriisque flūmen transgressi, our troops having crossed the river with the slingers and archers. — Cæs. B.G. II. 19. (But see § 25, end.)

Verbs of contending take cum (or dat. in poetry).

There is no essential distinction between the ablative and the genitive of quality (§ 50, 1. 2), except that the genitive is exclusively used to denote measure, classification, or requirement: as, suādēre princīpi multi lābōris, to counsel a prince is a thing requiring great labor. — Tac. Hist. I. 15.

III. With the verbs ūtor, use; frutor, enjoy; fungor, fulfil; pōtior, get; vescor, feed, and most of their compounds; also dignor, deem worthy:

ūtar vestrā bēnignitāte, I will avail myself of your kindness. — Cic. Arch. 8.

Pōtior also governs the genitive, as always in the expression, pōtīri rērum, to possess the power. — Cic. Fam. I. 8.

IV. After the adjectives dignus, worthy; indignus, unworthy, frētus, relying, and praeditus, endowed: as, deā carminē dignā est, the goddess is worthy of song. — Ov. Met. V. 344.

V. After comparatives, instead of quam, than: as, ōcior eurō [equivalent to ōcior quam eurus], swifter than the east wind. — Virg. Æn. VIII. 223.

The adverbs plus, amplius, more; mīnus, less, with several comparatives of measure or distance, are often used without quam, leaving the grammatical structure of the sentence unchanged: as, plus septingenti capti, more than seven hundred were taken. — Liv. XLI. 12.

plus tertiā parte interfectā, more than a third being slain. — Cæs. B.G. III. 6.

spātium non amplius pēdum sexcentorum, a space not broader than 600 feet. — Id. 38.

The ablative also shows the degree of difference: as, quo mīnus cūpīditātis, eo plus auctōritātis, the less greed, the more weight. — Liv. XXIV. 28.

VI. After words implying separation, and plenty or want: as, Fōrum Appi, differtum nautis, Forum Appii, crammed with bargemen. — Hor. Sat. I. 5, 3.

Ephōrus calcārībus eget, Ephorus needs the spur. — Quint. X. 1.
cūris hōmīnum gaudia misces, thou minglest joys with the cares of men. — Cat. 64.

magno me mētū libērābis, you will free me from great fear. — Cic. Cat. I. 5.

Prepositions express the place more definitely: as, exīre ex urbe, to go out from the city. — Cic. Cat. I. 5.

NOTE. — For the genitive of plenty or want, see § 50, III. 2.

VII. After opus and ūsus, need: as, nunc vīribus ūsus, now there is need of strength. — Virg. Æn. VIII. 441.

So, often, the abl. neuter of the perfect participle: as, cauto opust, we need caution. — Plaut. Capt. II. 1, 28.

Opus (rarely ūsus) may also stand in apposition with the thing needed: as, illud quod maxīme opus est, that which is most needed. — Ter. Ad. IV. 7, 22 (740).

VIII. Often, without a preposition, after perfect participles denoting origin: as,

Cērēre nātī, the children of Ceres. — Cic. N.D. II. 24.

But the prepositions ab, de, ex, are frequently used, — regularly, in speaking of remote descent: as, ab his majōribus orti, born of these ancestors. — Hor. Sat. I. 5.

IX. To denote price: as, signa sestertium sex millibus quingentis vendīta, the statues were sold for six thousand five hundred sesterces. — Cic. Verr. IV. 6.

stābunt tibi tua foedēra magno, your treaty will cost you dear. — Ov. Met. VII. 486.

To express indefinite price or value, the genitive is used: —

1. Of neuter adjectives, with verbs of valuing: as, magni intērest esse kālendis Jānuāriis in republiā duo consules, it is of great importance that on the first day of January there should be two consuls in the commonwealth. — Cic. Mur. 37.

With other verbs, the ablative must be used, except these genitives: tanti, so much; quantī, how much; plūris, more; minōris, less.

2. Of certain nouns: as, falso an vēro laudent non flocci faciunt, whether they praise truly or falsely, they care not a straw. — Plaut. Trin. 210.

The genitives so used are nihilī, nothing, assis, farthing, floci, lock of wool, and a few others.

X. ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE. — Two ablatives, generally a noun and participle, often stand in apposition with each other, having no grammatical dependence on the sentence in which they occur. This is called the Ablative Absolute: as, dis immortālībus dūcībus, under the guidance of the immortal gods. — Id. Cat. II. 9.

NOTE. — One ablative is always Subject, and the other Predicate, in the clause in which they stand.

Sometimes the participle or an adjective is in apposition with a phrase or clause, or is used adverbially: as, incerto quid pēterent, since it was uncertain what they sought. auspicato, after taking the auspices. — Tac. Hist. I. 84.

NOTE. — For the ablative, to denote the agent after passive verbs, see § 56, IV. — For prepositions governing the ablative, see § 42, II. — For the ablative of Time and Place, see § 55.

55. TIME AND PLACE.

I. Time when takes the ablative; time how long, the accusative: as, adventu in Galliam Caesāris, at the arrival of Caesar in Gaul.

— Cæs. B.G. V. 54.

dies continuos triginta, for thirty days together. — Id. 13.

paucis post diēbus, a few days after. — Cæs. B.C. III. 82.

Post is here an adverb; it may also be post paucos dies. The same usage exists with ante, before, and with ab, away from.

1. The use of a preposition gives more precision: as, in diēbus proximis dēcem, within the next ten days. — Sall. Jug. 28.

lūdi per dēcem dies, games through ten days. — Cic. Cat. III. 8.

2. Rarely the ablative expresses duration of time: as, quattuordēcim annis exsiliū tōlērāvit, he endured exile fourteen years. — Tac. Ann. I. 53.

II. Extent of space takes the accusative: as, fosas quindēcim pēdēs lātas, trenches fifteen feet broad. — Cæs. B.G. VII. 72. (Compare § 54, v.)

Measure is often expressed by the genitive: as, vallo pēdum xii, in circuitu xv mīlium sese continēbant, they kept close in an entrenchment of twelve feet [height], and of fifteen miles' circuit. — Cæs. B.G. II. 30.

Distance takes the accusative or ablative: as, Zāma quinque diērum iter ā Carthāgine ābest, Zama is a five days' journey distant from Carthage. — Liv. XXX. 29.
triginta mīlibus passuum infra eum locū, thirty miles below that place. — Cæs. B.G. VI. 35.

III. To express relations of place, prepositions are necessary, except with the names of towns and small islands; also dōmus, home, rūs, the country, and a few other nouns in special relations. With these nouns —

1. The name of the place from which is in the ablative: as, Brundūsio profectus ēs, you set out from Brundisium. — Cic. Att. I. 15, 2.

2. The name of the place to which is in the accusative: as, cum e Ciliciā dēcēdens Rhōdum vēnissem, when, on my way from Cilicia, I had reached Rhodes. — Cic. Brut. 1.
rus cras cum filio ibo, to-morrow I will go into the country with my son. — Ter. Ad. V. 3, 54.

Prepositions must be used to denote neighborhood: as, ad Tarentum, to (not into) Tarentum. — Cic. de Senect. 4.

3. The name of the place where was originally put in a special case called the Locative. This case ended in ī, and is generally the same in form with the Dative: as,

Rōmae, at Rome; Karthāgīnī, at Carthage; Athēnis, at Athens; Curibus, at Cures.

Corinthi, at Corinth; Lanuvi, at Lanuvium.

In the third declension this case sometimes ends in ē, like the ablative, especially when the metre requires it in poetry: as, Tībūrē vel Gābiis, at Tibur or Gabii. — Hor. Ep. II. 2, 3.

So dōmī, at home; bellī, militiae, in military service; humī, on the ground; rūrī, in the country (rurē is from the country).

hiēmāre Dyrrachii, Apolloniae, omnibusque oppīdis mārītīmis, to winter in Dyrrachium, Apollonia, and all the seaboard towns. — Cæs. B.C. III. 5.

erat ēdictum Pompēi nōmīne Amphipōli prōpōsitum, an order had been put up in Pompey's name at Amphipolis. — Id. 102.
Veīs de caelo lāpīdāverāt, it had rained stones at Veii. — Liv. XXVII. 37.

te dōmī mănēbo, I will wait for you at home. — Hor. Ep. I. 5, 3.

4. A possessive may stand with dōmus: as, nos dōmum tuam vōces, call us to thy home. — Tac. Agr. 46.

When it is modified in any other way, a preposition is generally used: as, in M. Laecae dōmum, into the house of Marcus Laeca. — Cic. Cat. I. 4.

5. The preposition is omitted before the ablative of a few other nouns: as, terrā mārīque, by land and sea. — Tib. I. 3, 56.

tōtā Siciliā, through all Sicily. — Cic. Verr. IV. 23.

So, very commonly, in poetry: as, lītōre curvo, on the curving shore. — Virg. Æn. III. 16.

IV. The way by which is put in the ablative: as,

Aurēliā viā prōfectus est, he set out by the Aurelian Way. — Cic. Cat. II. 4.

56. PREPOSITIONS.

I. Twenty-six prepositions govern the accusative; eleven the ablative. (See § 42.)

1. In and sub take the accusative when they denote motion; the ablative when they denote rest: as, Aristīdes in contiōnem vēnit, Aristides came into the assembly. — Cic. de Off. III. 11.

Thēmistōcles dixit in contiōne, Themistocles said in the assembly. — Id.

sub monte consēdit, he encamped at the foot of a mountain. — Cæs. B.G. I. 48.

sub vespērum Caesar portas claudi iussit, towards evening Caesar ordered the gates to be shut. — Id. II. 33.

But after verbs of placing, in usually takes the ablative: as, exercitum in hibernis collocāvit, he established the army in winter-quarters. — Cæs. B.G. III. 29.

2. Sūper governs the ablative when it means concerning; otherwise the accusative (or abl. in poetry): as, hac sūper rē, concerning this matter. — Cic. Att. XVI. 16.

summa sūper culmīna tecti, over the roof of the house. — Virg. Æn. II. 694.

3. Subter governs the accusative; but sometimes the ablative in poetry: as, subter fastigia tecti, below the roof of the house. — Virg. Æn. VIII. 366.

subter litōre, below the shore. — Catull. 65, 7.

4. In giving the day of the month, the preposition ante, before, is usually omitted: as, xv. kälendas Augustas, the fifteenth day before the kalends of August (July 18). — Tac. Hist. II. 91.

Often ante diem (a. d.), with an ordinal, is used like a preposition governing an accusative: as, is dies erat a. d. v. kal. Apr., this day was the fifth day before the kalends of April (March 28). — Cæs. B.G. I. 6.

This phrase may even be governed by a preposition: as, in a. d. v. kälendas Növembres, to the fifth day before the kalends of November (October 28). — Cic. Cat. I. 3.

5. Tēnus (which follows its noun) sometimes governs the genitive: as,

Coroŷrae tēnus, as far as Corcyra. — Liv. XXVI. 24.

But regularly it takes the ablative: as, cāpūlo tēnūs, up to the hilt. — Virg. Æn. V. 553.

II. Certain adverbs are sometimes construed like prepositions: —

1. Prīdiē, postrīdiē, prōpius, proxīme, versus, and usque, and (less frequently) the adjectives prōpior and proxīmus, may be followed by the accusative (Compare § 50, end): as, prīdie nōnas Jūnias, the day before the nones of June (June 4). — Cic. Fam. III. 4. 1.

2 The adverb pālam may govern the ablative: as, pālam duōbus exercitibus, in the presence of two armies. — Liv. XXV. 18.

3. Clam may take either accusative or ablative: as, clam mātrem suam, without her mother's knowledge. — Plaut. M.G. 112 (II. 1, 33).

clam vōbis, without your knowledge. — Cæs. B.C. II. 32.

And prepositions are often used as adverbs.

III. Some prepositions which imply comparison, as ante, before; post, after, — like the adverb prius, before, — are followed, like comparatives, by quam; several words, or even clauses, sometimes coming between: as, nēque ante dimisit eum quam fidem dedit, nor did he let him go until he gave a pledge. — Liv. XXXIX. 10.

IV. The ablative, with a or ab, is regularly used after passive verbs, to denote the agent, if a person, or if spoken of as a person: as, Turpilius, jussus a Mētello causam dicere, Turpilius, being ordered by the consul to plead his cause. — Sall. Jug. 69.

This use of the ablative of the agent must be carefully distinguished from the ablative of instrument: as, occisus gladio, slain by a sword; but occisus ab hoste, slain by an enemy.

NOTE. — For the so-called dative of the agent with the gerundive, see §§ 51, VIII. 73, I.

III. SYNTAX OF THE VERB.

57. SEQUENCE OF TENSES. (See § 27.)

The Tenses of Finite Moods are distributed into two classes: —

1. PRIMARY, including the Present, both Futures, and Perfect (definite).

2. SECONDARY, including the Imperfect, Perfect (historical), and Pluperfect.

In compound sentences, a Primary tense in the leading clause is followed by a Primary tense in the dependent clause; and a Secondary tense is followed by a Secondary: as, vēnit ut nos videat, he comes to see us.

vēnit ut nos videat, he is come to see us.

vēnit ut nos vidēret, he came to see us.

vēni ut nos videas, come to see us.

I. The Perfect Subjunctive is regularly a primary tense, and is used to express any past action depending upon a verb in a primary tense: as, ex epistolis intelligi licet, quam fr̄quens fūrit Pl̄tonis aud̄itor, it may be judged from his epistles how constant a listener to Plato he was. — Cic. Orat. 4.

But occasionally it is used in an aoristic sense: as, eō discordiæ ventum, ut ad Vitellium perfuḡerit, the dissension reached such a height that he fled to Vitellius. — Tac. Hist. I. 60.

In this way a perfect subjunctive or infinitive, depending upon a primary tense, may itself be followed by secondary tenses: as, sic mihi perspic̄ere videor, it̄a n̄atos esse nos ut inter omnes esset societas quaedam, I think that I see that we were so born that there exists among all a certain alliance. — Cic. de Amic. 5.

The perfect subjunctive is also used for a future perfect: as, ostendit si sublata sit venditio bonorum, illum pecuniam grandem amissurum, he shows that if the sale of the property shall be stopped, he will lose much money [si sublata erit, amittet]. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 38.

II. The Present is often used in narrative for the Historical Perfect, and may be followed by Secondary Tenses: as, Senatus decernit uti in liberis custodiis haberentur, the Senate decrees that they should be held in free custody. — Sall. Cat. 47.

III. The Tenses denoting completed action are used much more accurately in Latin than in English: as, si eris meritus, fiet, if you deserve [shall have deserved], it shall be done. — Plaut. Trin. IV. 3, 61.
vivo et regno simul ista reliqui quae vos ad caelum fertis, I live and reign, as soon as I leave [have left] those scenes which you extol to heaven. — Hor. Ep. I. 10, 8.

After postquam, posteaquam, and ubi, the Perfect is used where we should expect the Pluperfect: as, postquam id animum advertit, when he had perceived this. — Cæs. B.G. I. 24.

Dum, while (not as long as), is usually followed by the Present Indicative, even when referring to past time : as, dum haec in collōquio gēruntur, Caesāri nuntiātum est, while these things were going on in the conference, it was announced to Caesar. — Cæs. B.G. I. 46.

The Perfect Indefinite is often found (followed by secondary tenses), where the regular Perfect would be used in English : as, mihi ut urbi sātis esset praesīdii consultum atque prōvisum est, I have considered and provided that the city should have a sufficient guard. — Cic. Cat. II. 12.

IV. In dependent clauses, the tenses of the infinitive have no time of their own, but are present, past, or future, relatively to the time of the verb upon which they depend : as, nostros non esse infēriōres intellexit, he ascertained that our men were not inferior. — Cæs. B.G. II. 8.

quam Jūno fertur terris māgis omnibus cōluisse, which Juno is said to have cherished above all lands. — Virg. Æn. I. 15.
spērant se maximum fructum esse captūros, they hope to receive the greatest advantages. — Cic. de Amic. 21.

The present infinitive, after a verb in the past, must often be rendered by the perfect infinitive in English ; this is most frequent with pōtui, could ; dēbui, ought : as, scire potuit, he might have known. — Cic. pro Mil. 17.

qui videbatur omnino mōri non debuisse, who seemed one that ought not to have died at all. — Cic. pro Arch. 8.

Mēmīni, and some other verbs, in an account of what the speaker has personally witnessed, take the present infinitive : as, mēmīni Cātōnem mēcum dissērere, I remember Cato's discoursing with me. — Cic. de Amic. 3.

V. The statement of a general truth, following a secondary tense, observes the rule of connection of tenses : as, jūdicābant esse aliquid nātūrā pulchrum atque praeclārum quod suā sponte pētērētur, they were of opinion that there is something beautiful and glorious by nature, which is sought for its own sake. — Cic. de Senect. 13.

NOTE. — In letters, secondary tenses are often used for primary ; as if the letter were dated when it is received.

58. MOODS.

The Moods of a Latin verb are the Indicative, Subjunctive, Imperative, and Infinitive.

I. The Indicative is regularly employed for the leading verb of a sentence: it is used in direct assertions or questions, and in historical narrative.

II. The Subjunctive is used chiefly for dependent constructions, — especially to denote any thing as contingent, conceived of, or desired, — its tense being determined by that of the verb on which it depends. (See § 57.) In particular it is found, —

1. In many Conditional sentences, the condition being often implied, §§ 59, 60, 61, 62.

2. In certain relations of Cause or Motive, § 63.

3. In clauses which express Purpose or Result, §§ 64, 65.

4. In intermediate and subordinate clauses, chiefly relative or interrogative, §§ 66, 67.

5. In wishes and commands (in the present and perfect), to take the place of the Imperative, § 68.

III. The Imperative is used in commands; also, in early writers and poets, in prohibitions: as, consūlīte vōbis, prospicīte patriae, conservāte vos, take measures for your safety, provide for the country, preserve yourselves. — Cic. Cat. IV. 2.

nīmium ne crēde cōlōri, do not trust complexion overmuch. — Virg. Buc. II. 17.

Prohibitions are regularly expressed by the second person singular of the perfect subjunctive with nō; nōlī with the infinitive; or by cāve with the subjunctive: as, ne terrītus fuēris, be not terrified. — Tac. Hist. I. 16.

nōlī pūtāre, do not think. — Cic. Brut. 33.

cāve faxis, do not do it. — Ter. Heaut. 187 (I. 2. 13).

The future imperative is used where there is a distinct reference to future time, especially in statutes, edicts, and wills: as, cum valetudīni tuae consulueris, tum consūlito navigationi, take care of your health first; then look to your sailing. — Cic. Fam. XVI. 4. (See § 24, III. 2.)

IV. The Infinitive, with or without a subject accusative, is construed either as the subject or as the object of the leading verb. In this use, it is found especially in the construction called ōrātiō obliqua. (See § 67.)

In other cases, hardly any tense is used except the present, expressing no distinct relation of time: as, mitto quaerere, I refrain from asking. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 19.

The poets and later writers use the infinitive after adjectives, or to express a purpose: as, dūrus compōnere versūs, harsh in composing verses. — Hor. Sat. I. 4, 8.

fūrit tē rēpērire, he rages to find thee. — Id. Carm. I. 15, 27.

It may also be used (with subject-acc.) in Exclamations: as, te in tantas aerumnas propter me incidisse! alas, that you should fall into such grief for me! — Cic. Fam. XIV. 1.

59. CONDITIONAL SENTENCES.

I. When any thing is stated, the truth of which is made to depend on the truth of some other statement, contained in a subordinate clause, the sentence is called a Conditional Sentence.

The Principal clause — that containing the conclusion — is called the apodōsis; the Subordinate clause — that stating the condition — is called the protāsis: as, si qui exire vōlunt, connivēre possum, if any wish to depart (protāsis), I can keep my eyes shut (apodōsis). — Cic. Cat. II. 12.

II. The statement of the condition in Latin (protāsis) is regularly introduced by si, if; sin, but if; nisi, unless; but a clause introduced by an indefinite relative (whoever), or a relative conjunction (when, since, and the like), may be considered as equivalent to a conditional clause: as, quam se cumque in partem dedisset, omnium fuit facillē princeps, in whatever direction he applied himself, he easily took the first place. — Cic. de Off. III. 16.

The statement of the consequence or result depends in form on the grammatical structure of the sentence, which may require a participle, infinitive, or phrase: as, quod si praeterea nemo sequatur, tamen se cum sola decima legione iturum, de qua non dubitaret, but if no one else would follow, still he would go with the tenth legion alone, of which he had no doubt. — Cæs. B.G. I. 40.

si quos adversum proelium et fuga Gallorum commoveret, hos si quaerere reperire posse, if any were troubled by this check, and by the flight of the Gauls, they might find if they would ask. — Id.

III. Any tense of the Indicative may be used to express both condition and result in its appropriate time: as, si ergo apud inferos miseri non sunt, ne sunt quidem apud inferos ulli, if, therefore, the wretched are not in the infernal regions, there is no one there at all. — Cic. Tusc. I. 6.

sanahimur si volumus, we shall be healed if we wish. — Id.

III. 6.

quicquid iuraverunt, ventus et unda rapit, whatever they have sworn [i.e., if they have sworn any thing], the winds and waves sweep away. — Prop. II. 28, 8.

IV. The Subjunctive is used in both members of conditional sentences: —

1. The Present, in reference to future time, to express a supposition less vividly or as less probable than when the future indicative is used: as, nec si muneribus certa, concedat Iollas, nor if you should vie in gifts, would Iollas yield. — Virg. Buc. II. 57.

haec si tecum patria loquatur, nonne impetrare debeat? If thy country should thus speak to thee, ought she not to prevail? — Cic. Cat. I. 8.

Often the future indicative stands in the apodosis; as, si deficiant vires, audacia certe laus erit, if strength should fail, boldness at least will have praise. — Prop. II. 10, 5.

2. The Secondary tenses, when the supposition is known to be false; the imperfect referring to present time, the pluperfect to past: as, si meum consilium auctoritasque vāluisset, tu hōdiē ēgōres, nos libēri essēmus, respublīca non tot dūces et exercitus amīsisset, if my judgment and authority had prevailed [as they did not], you would this day be poor [which you are not], we should be free, the republic would not have lost so many leaders and armies. — Cic. Phil. II. 15.

The indicative (in apodosis) sometimes expresses what ought to have been done, or is intended, or already begun: as, si Rōmae Cn. Pompēius privātus esset hoc tempōrē, tāmen is erat dēligendus, if Cnæus Pompey were a private citizen at Rome at this time, nevertheless he ought to be selected. — Cic. Leg. Man. 17.

in amplexū filiae ruēbat, nīsi lictores obstītissent, he was about rushing into his daughter's arms, unless the lictors had prevented. — Tac. Ann. XVI. 32.

When a subjunctive is required in the apodosis of a conditional clause, by the structure of the sentence of which it forms a part, the pluperfect may be represented by the participle in rus with the perfect subjunctive of esse: as, ādeo pārāta sēdītio fuit, ut Othōnem raptūri fuērint, nī incerta noctis tīmuissent, so far advanced was the conspiracy, that they would have seized upon Otho if they had not feared the uncertainties of the night [rāpuissent nī tīmuissent following ut]. — Tac. Hist. I. 26.

3. The Subjunctive is sometimes used to express a condition of a general nature, referring indefinitely to any one of a series of acts; in this case the indicative is used in the apodosis to state a repeated or customary action, or general truth: as, mēmōria mīnuītur nīsi eam exerceas, the memory grows weak unless you exercise it. — Cic. Sen. 7.

id ūbi dixisset, hastam in fines eōrum mittebat, when he [the herald] had said this, he would throw [used to throw] a spear into their territories. — Liv. I. 32.

NOTE. — Verbs expressing power, propriety, etc., may take the indicative in apodosis; the imperfect to express present time, the perfect and pluperfect for past: as, satiū erat, it were better.

60. IMPLIED CONDITIONS.

The subordinate member of a conditional sentence (that containing the condition), is frequently omitted. Under this head belong most of the subjunctives which appear to be independent verbs, and which would not always take this mood if the condition were fully stated (See § 68).

In this usage the perfect subjunctive is especially common; and the second person singular, to denote some indefinite person.

The Subjunctive in implied conditions is employed as in the following examples:—

1. In its so-called Potential use, referring to an indefinite subject: as, tum in lecto quōque vidēres sūsurreo, then on each couch you might see whisperings.—Hor. Sat. II. 8, 77.

Here a complete sentence would require the pluperfect: thus, vidisses si adfuisses, you would have seen if you had been there.

2. In cautious, modest, or hypothetical statement: as, nec ullam mōrum partem māgis laudāvēria, nor would one commend more highly any one of their customs.—Tac. Germ. 17. vēlim sic tibi persuādeas, I wish you would persuade yourself of this.—Cic. Fam. XV. 4.

vellem adesset M. Antōnius, I wish Mark Antony were present.—Id. Phil. I. 7.

Vēlim refers to future time, vellem to present or past time, in a wish for something known to be impossible.

3. In questions asked with a certain hesitation or doubt: as, quid ego carmine plūra commēmōrem? why should I relate more in verse?—Catull. 64, 116.

4. In conceding a point, or supposing a case;—here the inference or conclusion is the clause omitted: as, fuērit ille Brūtus, qui dōminātu rēgio rempublicam libēravit, suppose there was a Brutus who freed the republic from the tyranny of the kings.—Cic. Phil. I. 6.

si jam sint id adepti, suppose they have already obtained it.—Id. Cat. II. 9.

61. CONDITIONAL PARTICLES.

Certain Particles implying a condition are followed by the Subjunctive. These are —

1. Particles of comparison, — tamquam, quāsi, vēlūti, &c.: as, tamquam mōdo ex deōrum concilio descendisset, as if he had just come down from the council of the gods. — Cic. N.D. I. 8.

quāsi plūres fortunāti sint quam infēlices, as if more were fortunate than unfortunate. — Cic. Tusc. I. 36.

2. The concessive particles, quamvis, licet and ut, granting that; cum, although; and, in later writers, quamquam, although: as, itāque eum qui audiunt, quamvis ipsi infantes sint, tamen illo mōdo confidunt se posse dicere, therefore those who hear him, however incapable of speaking they may themselves be, nevertheless feel confident that they can speak in that manner. — Cic. Orat. 23.

ut nēmīnem ālium nisi T. Pātinam rōgasset, scire pōtuit, even if he had asked no one but Titus Patina, he might have known. — Cic. Mil. 17.

quamquam per dictātorem dilectus hābitus esset, although the levy had been held under the authority of the dictator. — Liv. II. 32.

cum mercēde doceret, although he taught for pay. — Cic. de Orat. I. 28.

Quamquam and etsi introduce the statement of a fact, and regularly take the indicative; quamvis, licet, and ut, of a supposed case, and take the subjunctive; cum, signifying although, while used as equivalent to quamquam, takes the subjunctive by special use. (See § 62, 1.)

3. Dum, dummōdō, and mōdō, provided: as, multa admiranda sunt, cūq̄re mōdo cūrae sit, many points are deserving of admiration, provided there be care in selecting. — Quint. X. 1, 131.

NOTE. — A Relative is often equivalent to a Demonstrative preceded by a Conditional, Causal, or Final Particle. (See §§ 63, 64.)

62. RELATIONS OF TIME.

I. Cum (quum), meaning when, takes the indicative; since, or although, the subjunctive: as, cum se inter equitum turmas insinuaverunt, when they have worked their way among the troops of horse. — Cæs. B.G. IV. 33.

cum solitudo et vita sine amicis insidiarum et metus plena sit, since solitude and a life without friends is full of treachery and fear. — Cic. de Fin. I. 20.

But cum, when, is followed by the secondary tenses of the subjunctive in narration: as, cum essem in Cœramico, when I was in the Ceramicus. — Cic. Att. I. 10.

II. Dum, dōnēc, quoad, until; and antēquam, priusquam, before, may take the subjunctive, —

1. In reference to future time;

2. To express something desired or anticipated; or,

3. (The secondary tenses) in historical narration: as, priusquam ad portum venias, before you come to the harbor. — Ter. Ad. IV. 2, 44.

dum novi magistratūs sortirentur prōvincias, M. Baebius transire in Epīrum est jussus, until the new magistrates should draw lots for their provinces, Marcus Baebius was ordered to cross into Epirus. — Liv. XXXV. 24.

festinandum ceteris vidēbātur, antēquam cresceret invālida adhuc conjūratio, the others were of opinion that it was best to hasten, before the yet weak conspiracy should gather strength. — Tac. Hist. I. 33.

trēpidatiōnis aliquantum ēlēphanti edēbant, dōnēc quietem ipse timor fecisset, the elephants caused some confusion, until their very fear had caused quiet. — Liv. XXI. 28.

These particles also sometimes take the subjunctive in statements of a general truth or customary action: as, priusquam populus suffragium ineat, in incertum comitiōrum eventum patres auctores fiunt, before the people come to the vote, the senate forestall the uncertain result of the election. — Liv. I. 17.

63. CAUSE OR REASON.

I. The conjunctions quod (sometimes quā), because, and quoniam and quando, since, are followed by the subjunctive when the reason is stated not as a fact, but as a motive in the mind of another, and even of the speaker or writer himself: as,

Drusus rettulit ad Sēnātum dē illo quod in eum ordinem consul tam graviter in contione esset invectus, Drusus laid his [Philippus's] case before the Senate, on the ground that he, although consul, had inveighed so bitterly against that body in the public assembly. — Cic. de Orat. III. 1.

accēdit illa quōque causa, quod a ceteris forsitan ita pettum sit ut dicerent, ut utrumvis salvo officio facere se posse arbitrarentur, there is this reason besides [in my own mind], that others have perhaps been invited to speak, in such a way that they supposed they might act either way with a clear conscience. — Id. Rosc. Am. 1. (See § 66, 1.)

Non quō (negatively non quin) is often used for non quod: as, non quo furtum facere studuerit, not that he desired to commit a theft. — Ter. Eun. 28.

II. Relatives implying a cause or reason take the subjunctive, being frequently strengthened by ut, utpote, quippe, or praesertim: as, fateor me errasse, qui hoc maluērim, I confess that I erred in choosing this. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 49.

quippe qui ne in oppidum quidem nisi perraro veniret, no doubt, for he hardly ever came to town at all. — Id. 18.

praesertim quod tua negligentia factum arbitremur, particularly as we think it happened by your neglect. — Id. Flacc. 17.

III. Cum causal, signifying since, takes the subjunctive: as, cum omnis populi Romani religio in sacra et in auspicia divisa sit, since the whole religion of the Roman people is divided into ceremonies and auspices. — Cic. N.D. III. 2.

But in the sense of quod, on the ground that, it takes the indicative: as, gratulor tibi cum tantum vales apud Dolabellam, I congratulate you on your influence with Dolabella. — Cic. Fam. IX. 14.

64. PURPOSE.

I. Final Clauses, or those expressing a Purpose, take the subjunctive after relatives (quī=ut is), or the conjunction ut (ūti), in order that, and (negatively) ne, ut ne, lest: as, mōnet ut ignes in castris fieri prōhibeat, ne qua ejus adventūs prōcul significatio fiat, he advises him to prohibit fires being made in camp, in order that no signs of his arrival may be shown at a distance. — Cæs. B.G. VI. 29.

ut ne sit impūne, that it be not with impunity. — Cic. Mil. 12.

II. Quo is used for ut eo, especially with comparatives: as, castris ad Bābylōniam pōsitis quo majore animo cāpessērent bellum, the camp being pitched near Babylon, in order that they might enter into the war with greater spirit. — Curt. III. 2, 2.

NOTE. — Compare quōmīnus, (= ut eo minus), after verbs of hindering. — § 65, III.

III. After expressions denoting fear, ut (ne non) is to be translated that not; ne, that or lest: as, omnes lābōres te excipere video; timeo ut sustineas, I see you taking upon yourself all labors; I fear you will not endure them. — Cic. Fam. XIV. 2.

pavor cēperat milites, ne mortiferum esset vulnus, fear had seized the soldiers that the wound [of Scipio] was mortal. — Liv. XXIV. 42.

IV. Ut or ne is often omitted, especially after verbs of wishing, advising, &c.; as, cāve ignoscas, do not pardon. — Cic. Lig. 5.

Syro ignoscas vōlo, I wish that you would pardon Syrus. — Ter. Heaut. V. 5, 22.

NOTE. — For ut, signifying although, see § 61, 2. In the sense of when, as, how, it takes the indicative: as, ut vālet? how is she? Pl. Trin; ut vīdi, when I saw. — Virg. Buc. VIII. 41.

V. The purpose of an action is expressed in Latin in various ways; but never (except rarely in poetry) by the simple infinitive, as in English. The sentence, he sent men to plough the field, may be rendered, —

1. By the subjunctive with ut: as, hōmīnes misit ut agrum ārarent.
2. By the subjunctive with qui: as, homines misit qui agrum ararent.
3. By the Gerund or Gerundive with ad: as, homines misit ad agrum arandum. (§ 73, IV.)
4. By the Gerundive with causā or gratiā: as, homines misit agri arandi causā. (§ 73, III.)
5. By the Future Participle: as, homines misit agrum aratūros. (§ 25, I.)

Purpose is also expressed by the Former Supine in many verbs: as, spectātum lūdōs ivit, he went to see the games. (§ 74.)

65. CONSEQUENCE OR RESULT.

I. Clauses denoting a Result take the subjunctive after relatives and the conjunction ut (negative, ut non): as,

Augusto prompta ac prōfluens quaeque dēcēret princīpem ēlōquentia fuit, Augustus possessed a ready and fluent power of speaking, such as became a prince. — Tac. Ann.
XIII. 3.

Quae fuit eōrum tanta inīquitas ut plācāri pōpūlo Rōmāno non possent nisi vīri tāles occīdissent? How great was their injustice [that of the gods] that they could not be reconciled to the Roman people unless men of such eminence should fall? — Cic. N.D. III. 6.

II. Quin, that not, is used after negative expressions, denoting hinderance, resistance, doubt, and suspension of effort: as,

est dēterrīta numquam quin flēret, she was never prevented from weeping. — Tib. I. 3, 13.

non dūbīto quin hanc sālūtem antēpōnas illi victōriae, I do not doubt that you value this security more highly than that victory. — Cic. Lig. 10.

Many of these expressions may also be followed by the infinitive, or by ne with the subjunctive: as, prōhibentur ādīre ad fīlios [also ne ađeant], they are forbidden to visit their own sons. — Cic. Verr. V. 45.

III. Quōmīnus, that not, may be used after verbs of hindering: as, nec aetas impēdit, quōmīnus agri cōlendi stūdia tēneāmus, nor does the time of life prevent us from retaining the taste for tilling the ground. — Cic. de Senect. 17.

IV. The subjunctive stands in relative clauses —

1. After dignus, worthy; indignus, unworthy; aptus, idōneus, fit; ūnus and sōlus, only: as, idonea mihi Laeli persōna vīsa est, quae dē āmicītia dissēreret, the person of Laelius seemed to me a suitable one to discourse of friendship. — Cic. de Amic. I.

nīl admirārī prōpe rēs est ūnā sōlāque, quae possit faciēre et servāre beātum, to be surprised at nothing is almost the sole and only thing which can make and keep one happy. — Hor. Ep. I. 6, 1.

2. After general expressions denoting existence and non-existence: as, erant qui Helvidium mīserārentur, there were some who pitied Helvidius. — Tac. Ann. XVI. 29.

nihil est illōrum, quin [= quod non] ēgo illi dixērim, there is none of these things which I have not said to him. — Plant.
 Bacc. III. 9, 89.

undē agger comportārī posset, nihil erat rēliqum, there were no materials left from which a mound could be got together.
 — Cæs. B.C. II. 15.

3. After quam, than: as, majōres arbōres caedēbant, quam quas ferre miles posset, they cut larger trees than a soldier could carry. — Liv.

 XXXIII. 5.

66. INTERMEDIATE CLAUSES.

I. A Relative, or other subordinate clause, takes the Subjunctive, when it is regarded as an integral part of the thought or expression of some other person than the speaker or writer.

Many such clauses may be so regarded or not, as the writer chooses : as, primam pōsuit eam de qua mōdo dixi, quae orta esset ex praesensione rerum futurarum, he first mentioned that of which I have just spoken [direct statement] which (according to him) had its origin in the fore-feeling of the Future. — Cic. N.D. II. 5. (See § 63, 1.)

II. A clause depending on a verb in the subjunctive will also be in the subjunctive, if regarded as an integral part of the sentence on which it depends : as, qui a scribendi consuetūdine ad dicendum vēnit, hanc adfert facultatem, ut etiam subito si dicat, tamen illa quae dicantur similia scriptorum esse videantur, he who passes from the practice of writing to speaking, brings with him this power, that even if he speak without preparation, yet what he says seems like written words. — Cic. de Orat. I. 33. [etiam subito si dicit, tamen illa quae dicuntur similia scriptorum esse videntur.]

III. Intermediate Clauses in the oratio obliqua take the Subjunctive. (See the following section.)

67. ORATIO OBLIQUA.

If a quotation is made in the words of the original speaker, it is called Oratio Recta (direct discourse). But if it is made to depend on some verb of speaking or thinking, varying the form of the words from that originally used, it is called Oratio Obliqua (indirect discourse).

In English, an indirect quotation is introduced by the conjunction that.

I. The Latin form for quotations is as follows : —

1. In Indirect Questions the subjunctive is used : as, quid sit futurum cras fūge quaerere, avoid inquiring what will be to-morrow. [direct question, quid est futurum cras ?]

Hor. Carm. I. 9, 13.

nec quibus rationibus superare possent, sed quemadmodum uti victoriā debērent cogitabant, nor did they (the army of Pompey) reflect by what means they could win the victory, but in what manner they should use it. — Cæs. B.C. III. 83.

Thus quid quaeris ? (direct question) means, what do you ask ? solo quid quaeras (indirect question) means, I know what you ask ; solo quod quaeris (direct assertion) means, I know the thing you ask. The indic. is rarely used for indir. questions.

NOTE. — Nescio quis, I know not who, is sometimes used (generally in the way of disparagement), to introduce a direct assertion ; being nearly equivalent to aliquis or quidam, some one, and may take the indicative : as, quin etiam fuit audiendus Licinius nescio qui, then too you had to listen to one Licinius. — Cic. Mil. 24.

Nescio an, I know not whether, is often used as equivalent to perhaps, and regularly takes the subjunctive.

2. A Declarative sentence, when quoted, takes the construction of the accusative with the infinitive, the subject being put in the accusative, and the verb in the appropriate tense of the infinitive : as, scripsit epistolam, he has written a letter ; dicit se scripsisse epistolam, he says he has written a letter.

Crassus valet, Crassus is well ; dicit Crassum valere, he says that Crassus is well.

non laetor, I am not glad ; nego me laetari, I say I am not glad.

mihī videor satis et esse deos et quales essent ostendisse, I think I have shown clearly enough, both that there are gods, and of what nature they are. — Cic. N.D. II. 28. (§ 57, v.)

Esse here expresses an indirect statement ; essent, an indirect question.

The principal clause of a Conditional Sentence (apodosis) when indicative in the Oratio Recta, follows in the Oratio Obliqua the general rule for Declarative sentences ; but when subjunctive, it is represented by the future participle with esse if present or imperfect, or fuisse if pluperfect : as, nisi iurasset scelus se facturum arbitrābatur [scelus faceret], he thought he would incur guilt unless he should take the oath. — Cic. Verr. I. 47.

jūrant itā Cicerōnem locūtūrum fuisse [locūtus esset], they swear that Cicero would have spoken so. — Quint. X. 2, 17.

NOTE.—The subjunctive is not used as a principal verb, except in the apodosis of a conditional sentence (See § 60).

The subject of the Infinitive is sometimes omitted, when it would be easily understood: as, rōgāvi pervēnissentne Agrigentum; dixit pervēnisse [sc. ea], I asked whether they (the curtains) had reached Agrigentum; he answered that they had. — Cic. Verr. IV. 12.

II. Subordinate clauses in the oratio obliqua take the subjunctive, the tense being determined by that of the principal verb (see § 57 also, § 66. 1.) : as,

I. Lentulus consul sēnātui reliquē publicae se non dēfūtūrum pollicētur, si audacter ac fortiter sententias dicere vellent, Lucius Lentulus the consul promises not to desert the Senate and the republic, if they are willing to speak their minds boldly and bravely [non deēro ... si vōlētis]. — Cæs. B.C. I. 1.

Ariovistus respondit: si quid ipsi a Caesāre ōpus esset, sese ad eum venturum fuisse; ... sibi autem mirum videri, quid in suā Galliā, quam bello vicisset, aut Caesāri aut omnino pōpulo Rōmāno nēgōtū esset, Ariovistus answered, that, if he wanted any thing of Caesar, he would have come to him; ... but that he wondered what concern either Caesar or the Roman people at all had with his Gaul, which he had conquered in war [si quid ōpus esset ... vēnissem; ... mirum vidētur, quid in mea Galliā, quam bello vici, ... Caesāri ... nēgōtū sit]. — Cæs. B.G. I. 34.

But the indicative frequently stands in a clause of this character, where it states an independent fact, and is not a part of the general assertion: as, quis neget haec omnia quae videmus deorum potestate administrari? who can deny that all these things we see are ruled by the power of the gods? — Cic. Cat. III. 9.

1. An Imperative in the Oratio Recta becomes a subjunctive in the Oratio Obliqua: as, nē committēret, let him not bring it about [ne commissēris]. — Cæs. B.G. I. 13.

2. A Question is put in the infinitive, unless in the second person, in which case it becomes subjunctive : as, si vëtëris contùmëliæ oblivisci vellet, num ëtiam rëcentium injûriarum mëmôriam [se] depônëre posse? if he were willing to forget the ancient disgrace, could he also lay aside the memory of recent outrages? [num possim?] — Cæs. B.G. I. 14.

quid sibi vellent? what did they wish? [quid vultis?] — Id. 44.

III. 1. A future infinitive is often expressed by fõrë (fütûrum esse) ut with the subjunctive; regularly so in passive or deponent verbs : as, rëbantur ënim fõre ut exercîtus impëratõrem persëquërëtur, for they thought that the army would follow the general. — Cic. N.D. III. 6.

nisi nuntii de Cæsãris victoriã essent adlati, existimabant plerique futurum fuisse uti amittëretur, unless news of Cæsar's victory had been brought, most thought he would have been lost. — Cæs. B.C. III. 101.

2. After verbs signifying hope, promise, and the like, the subject of the infinitive, whether a noun or a personal or reflective pronoun, must always be expressed : as, promisit se venturum, he promised to come.

spërat se nëgõtiûm confecturum, he hopes to finish the business.

But where there is no future participle, fõre ut with the subjunctive must be used : as, sperat fõre ut possit, he hopes to be able.

pollicëtur fõre ut frumentum adfërat, he promises that corn shall be brought (more rarely, adlatum iri or fore).

IV. 1. The passive of verbs of saying, &c., may either be used impersonally, followed by the accusative with the infinitive; or personally, followed by the infinitive alone : as, prîmi trãduntur arte quãdam verba vinxisse, they are related to have been the first to combine words by a certain art [also, traditur eos primos, etc.] — Cic. Orat. 13.

2. The infinitive passive may be used impersonally after these verbs : as, in eo ipso in quō praedicationem nobilitatemque despiciunt, praedicari de se ac nominari volunt, in that very work, in which they disparage renown and celebrity, they desire that they may be renowned and named. — Cic. Arch. 10.

V. After a comparison, in the Oratio Obliqua, the construction of the accusative with the infinitive is usually continued : as, nullam capitiāliorem pestem quam voluptatem corporis hominibus dicebat a naturā datam [not quam voluptas], he said that no more deadly evil had been given to men by nature than bodily pleasure. — Cic. de Senect. 12.

68. WISHES AND COMMANDS.

I. The subjunctive (often strengthened by the particles ut, utinam, o si) is used in wishes ; the primary tenses in reference to future time ; the secondary to express a hopeless wish, the imperfect in present time, the pluperfect in past : as, sērus in caelum rēdeas, mayst thou return late to the skies. —

Hor. Carm. I. 2, 45.

utinam me mortuum videres, would that you had seen me dead. — Cic. ad Q. Fr. I. 3, 1.

The primary tenses of the subjunctive so used are often equivalent to an imperative (see § 58, III.) : as, ne semper ūdum Tībur et Aesūlae dēclive contemplēris arva, do not for ever gaze at watery Tībur and the sloping fields of Aesula. — Hor. Carm. III. 29, 6.

II. With verbs of wishing and permitting the infinitive is generally used : as, te tuā frui virtūte cūpimus, we wish you to reap the benefit of your virtue. — Cic. Brut. 97.

neu sīnas Mēdos equitare inultos, nor permit the Medes to make incursions with impunity. — Hor. Carm. I. 2, 51.

But the subjunctive may be used without ut : as, vellem mos esset, I would it were the custom. — Ter. Ad. IV. 1, 16. (§ 64, IV.)

III. Jūbeo, command, and vēto, forbid, take the accusative and the infinitive; other verbs of commanding, the dative with ut and the subjunctive: as, omnem sēnātum ad se convēnīre jussit, he commanded the entire senate to come to him. — Cæs. B.G. II. 5.

suis impērāvit ne quod omnīno tēlum in hostes relcērent, he ordered his soldiers to hurl back no weapon at all against the enemy. — Id. I. 46. (But impēro hoc fieri.)

69. SUBJUNCTIVE IN RELATIVE CLAUSES.

The various relative clauses have been already treated of, under the special heads to which they belong. They may be classed under the following titles: —

1. General relatives in protasis, §§ 59, 60, 61.
2. Temporal clauses (relative adverbs of time), § 62, IV.
3. Relative implying a Cause, § 63, II.
4. Relative of Purpose, § 64, I.
5. Relative of Consequence or Result, § 65, I. & IV.
6. Relative in Intermediate Clauses, § 66.
7. Relative clauses in oratio obliqua, § 67.

NOTE. — In general, the relative with a definite antecedent takes the indicative in direct construction; with an indefinite antecedent, the subjunctive: as, hi sunt qui itā pūtant, these are they that think so.

sunt qui ita putent, there are some who think so. (§ 65, IV. 2.)

70. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES.

A Substantive Clause is a clause or phrase — usually the indicative with quod, the subjunctive with ut, or the accusative with the infinitive — which is construed like a noun, as the subject or object of a leading verb, or in apposition with the subject or object.

The subordinate verb in a substantive clause is usually in the subjunctive, as in § 66. For examples, see §§ 64, 65, 67, 68; also the following: —

I. Verbs implying motive or desire generally take ut (nē) with the subjunctive (see §§ 64, 65, 68): as, concedo tibi ut ea praeter eas, I allow you to pass over these points. — Cic. Rosc. Am. 19.

When verbs of this class are used for a mere expression of opinion, they take the accusative with the infinitive: as, concedo non esse miserum qui mortui sint, I grant that those who are dead are not miserable. — Cic. Tusc. I. 7.

II. Impersonal verbs and other expressions denoting happening and existence, take a subjunctive introduced by ut (ut non), as subject (see § 65): as, sequitur ut cuiusque generis nota quaeratur, it follows that the mark of each class should be sought. — Cic. Orat. 23.

accidit ut esset plena luna, it chanced to be full moon. — Cæs. B.G. IV. 29.

accedit ut conturber, another point is that I am disturbed. — Cic. Deiot. 1.

mos est hominum ut nolint eundem pluribus rebus excellere, it is the custom of men to be unwilling to admit that the same person excels in several respects. — Id. Brut. 21.

III. Verbs of satisfaction and wonder, and impersonal expressions denoting fitness, take the accusative with the infinitive: as, quae perfecta esse gaudeo, vehementerque laetor, I rejoice and greatly exult that these things have been accomplished.

 — Cic. Rosc. Am. 47.

accusatores multos esse in civitate utile est, it is advantageous that there be many accusers in a state. — Id. 20.

IV. Quod with the indicative is used to indicate the existence of a state of things, and at the same time express a judgment (compare § 63, 1.): as, gaudeo quod te interpellavi, I rejoice that I interrupted you. — Cic. Legg. III. 1.

noli putare pigritiam me facere, quod non meam manum scribo, do not think that it is through indolence that I do not write with my own hand. — Id. Att. XVI. 15.

71. QUESTIONS.

Questions are introduced by interrogative Pronouns or Adverbs, or by the interrogative Particles num, utrum, an, and the Enclitic -ne.

An Enclitic is a particle joined in spelling to the preceding word, but retaining its independent meaning.

I. The enclitic -ne is used in questions asked for information merely; nonne when the answer yes, and num when the answer no, is expected; but in indirect questions num loses its peculiar meaning: as, mēmīnistisne? do you remember? — Cic. Ros. Am. 28.

nonne his vestigiis ad cāput mālēficii pervēniri sōlet? is it not customary to come by these traces to the source of a crime? — Id. 27.

num dūbium est? is there any doubt? — Id. 37.

The interrogative particle is often omitted: as, pātēre tua consilia non sentis? do you not perceive that your plans lie open? — Cic. Cat. I. 1.

II. In double questions, utrum or -ne stands in the first member, an (annon, necne), in the second: as, utrum has corpōris an Pythāgōrae tibi mālīs vīres ingēni dāri? would you rather this strength of body should be given you, or the strength of intellect of Pythagoras? — Cic. de Senect. 10.

quaero servosne an libēros, I ask whether slaves or free. — Id. Rosc. Am. 27.

The interrogative particle is often omitted in the first member, when -ne may stand in the second: as, sunt haec tua verba necne? are these your words or not? — Cic. Tusc. III. 18.

Sometimes the first member is omitted, and an alone asks a question with indignation or surprise: as, an tu misēros pūtas illos? do you think that those men are miserable? — Cic. Tusc. I. 7.

For Indirect Questions, see §§ 24, II., 67, I. 1.

72. PARTICIPLES.

The time of participles, like that of infinitives, is relative to that of the verbs upon which they depend.

1. Participles are often used where the English idiom would require a separate clause: as, vēnienti in Ligūres Hannibāli duo quaestōres Romāni trāduntur, as Hannibal is entering among the Ligurians, two Roman quaestors are given into his hands. — Liv. XXI. 59.

instructos ordines in locum aequum dēducit, he draws up the lines, and leads them into a favorable place. — Sall. Cat. 59.

See examples in § 25, page 27.

2. Sometimes a perfect participle agreeing with a noun is used when the action rather than the thing is to be made prominent: as, ab urbe conditā, from the founding of the city. — Liv. (title).

3. As there is no perfect active participle in Latin, the perfect passive, used absolutely with the noun which would have been the object, is used to express active relations: as, his inītis consiliis oppida mūniunt, having formed these plans, they fortify their towns. — Cæs. B.G. III. 9.

See, respecting the Ablative Absolute, § 54, x.

73. GERUND AND GERUNDIVE.

The Gerund governs the same case as the verb; in grammatical construction it follows the same rules with nouns. But where the gerund would have an object in the accusative, the gerundive is regularly used instead, agreeing with the noun, and in the case which the gerund would have had: as, pāratiōres ad omnia pericūla sūbeunda, better prepared to meet all dangers. — Cæs. B.G. I. 5.

Subeunda agrees with pericula, which is governed by ad; the construction with the gerund would be ad subeundum omnia pericula, ad governing the gerund, and the gerund governing the accusative pericula.

I. The nominative of the gerund or gerundive is construed with the dative of persons, implying obligation or duty: as, pugnandum est nobis, we must fight, — i.e. fighting is our business, or it belongs to us to fight (compare § 51, VI., VIII.). Cæsari omnia ūno tempore erant agenda, Cæsar had everything to do at once. — Cæs. B.G. II. 20.
jūveni pārandum sēni ūtendum est, it is for the young to get, for the old to enjoy. — Sen. Ep. 36.

The Infinitive is also used as a verbal noun, like the Gerund, taking the Genitive, or the neuter of the Possessive, to express possession or duty (§ 50, I. 1.), while the Gerund takes the Dative: as, sāpientis est parcius bibere; or, sāpienti est parcius bibendum, it is for a wise man to drink rather sparingly.

Where the use of the dative as agent would be ambiguous — as in verbs governing the dative — a different construction must be used: thus, ei parcendum est means either he must spare or he must be spared; but ei parcendum est a nobis, he must be spared by us.

II. The genitive is construed as an objective genitive (§ 50, III.), following nouns and adjectives: as, nēque consilii hābendi nēque arma capiendi spatio dāto, time being given neither for forming plans nor for taking arms. — Cæs. B.G. IV. 14.

It is used especially before causā or gratiā to express the purpose of an action: as, dissimulandi causā aut sui expurgandi, for the sake of dissembling or of excusing himself. — Sall. Cat. 31.

Or even alone with the same signification: as, cognoscendae antiquitatis, to study old times. — Tac. Ann. II. 59.

The gerund is sometimes used with the genitive of an object not agreeing with it in gender or number: as, sui liberandi facultas, the opportunity of getting themselves clear. — Cæs. B.G. IV. 34.

ego ejus videndi cupidus, rectā consequor, eager to see her, I follow straight. — Ter. Hec. III. 3, 12.

III. The dative follows words expressing purpose or fitness : as, cōmītia consūlibus creandis, comitia for appointing consuls. —

Liv. XXXV. 24. (Gerund, consūles creando.) te sociam studeo scribendis versibus esse, I desire that thou [Venus] be my partner in writing verses. — Lucr. I. 25.

It is used especially to designate the functions of magistrates : as, decemviri stlitibus [litibus] iudicandis, the Board of ten for determining lawsuits.

IV. The accusative follows the prepositions ad, inter, and ob (occasionally antē, circā, in) : as, me vocas ad scribendum, you invite me to write. — Cic. Orat. 10.

nactus aditus ad ea cōnanda, having found means to undertake these things. — Cæs. B.C. I. 31.

V. The ablative is used after the prepositions ab, de, ex, and in ; or to express manner or means : as, in quaerendis suis, in seeking his own comrades. — Cæs. B.G.

II. 21 (Gerund, in quaerendo suos).

multa pollicendo persuadet, he persuades by large promises. — Sall. Jug. 46.

74. SUPINE.

I. The Former Supine (in um) follows verbs of motion to express the purpose of the motion (compare § 55, III. 2) : as, quid est, Crassē, inquit Jūlius, imusne sessum? etai admōnitum vēnimus te non flāgitātum, what now, Crassus, said Julius, shall we take our seats? although we have come to remind, not to entreat you. — Cic. de Orat. III. 5.

II. The Latter Supine (in u) is found only in a few verbs, especially those which express telling, hearing, and the like. It has a passive sense, and follows certain adjectives which describe the character of the action : as, difficile est dictu, it is hard to say [in the telling]. — Cic. de Lege Manil. 22.

75. GENERAL RULES OF SYNTAX.

- I. A Noun used to describe another agrees with it in Case (APPOSITION). — § 46.
- II. Adjectives agree with Nouns in Gender, Number, and Case. — § 47.
- III. Relatives agree with their Antecedents in Gender, Number, and Person. — § 48.
- IV. A Verb agrees with its Subject Nominative in Number and Person. — § 49.
- V. The Genitive is used —
 1. (Subjective) to define or limit the meaning of a Noun. — § 50. I.
 2. (Partitive) to denote the Whole after words signifying a Part. — Id. II.
 3. (Objective) after Nouns, Adjectives, and Verbs, especially those implying mental action or emotion. — Id. III., IV.
- VI. The Dative is used —
 1. After words implying Advantage or Disadvantage. — § 51, I. III. IV.
 2. As the case of the Indirect Object. — Id. II.
 3. After many compounds of Prepositions. — Id. V. [VII.]
 4. With esse, to denote Possession or Purpose. — Id. VI.,
 5. With the Gerundive, &c., to denote the Agent. — Id. VIII.
- VII. The Accusative is the case —
 1. Of the Direct Object. — § 52, I.
 2. Of the Secondary Object after many verbs. — Id. III.
 3. As the subject of the Infinitive. — Id. VI.
- VIII. The Ablative is used —
 1. To express Cause, Means, and Specification. — § 54, I.
 2. With an Adjective, to express Manner or Quality. — Id. II.
 3. As the Object after certain Verbs and Adjectives, — Id. III, IV.
 4. After Comparatives. — Id. V.
 5. After words of Separation, Plenty, and Want. — Id. VI.
 6. Of Subject and Predicate, in Apposition (Ablative Absolute). — Id. X.

- IX. Time when takes the ablative; time how long and distance how far the accusative. — § 55, I., II.
 - X. Relations of Place are expressed without prepositions, in the names of Towns and small Islands. — Id. III.
 - XI. Twenty-six Prepositions govern the accusative; eleven the ablative. — § 56, I.
 - XII. The Agent, after the passive voice, is expressed by the ablative with ab. — Id. IV.
 - XIII. In Compound Sentences, a primary tense is followed by a primary, and a secondary tense by a secondary. — § 57.
 - XIV. The Indicative Mood is regularly employed for the leading verb, and the Subjunctive in dependent clauses. — § 58, I. II.
 - XV. The Infinitive may be used as the Subject or as the Object of the leading verb. — Id. IV.
 - XVI. The subject of the Infinitive is put in the Accusative. — § 52, VI.; § 67, I. 2.
 - XVII. Participles, Gerunds, and Supines govern the case of their own verbs; but in grammatical construction they follow the rules of nouns and adjectives. — §§ 72, 73, 74.
 - XVIII. Conjunctions connect similar Cases and Moods, § 43.
- For a summary of the uses of the Subjunctive, see § 58, II.

76. ARRANGEMENT.

The Arrangement of words in a Latin sentence is not arbitrary, but depends greatly on the skill of the writer to give emphasis, harmony, and clearness.

In general, the Subject stands first, and the Verb last, in the sentence or clause to which they belong. The Object commonly precedes pretty closely the verb which governs it. A relative clause often goes before that containing the antecedent, especially when any stress is laid upon it. "In all ordinary cases, the adjective follows the noun, the genitive its governing substantive, and the apposition the word which it qualifies."

The most emphatic words in a sentence are the first and the last; but emphasis is given by any unusual arrangement of the words.

Thus the usual order of words to express the phrase, the workman built me a house, would be: artifex mihi domum aedificavit. But either domum, aedificavit, or mihi may be emphasized by being put first; and artifex, by being put last.

If care is taken, in reading Latin aloud, — observing both emphasis and quantity as well as accent, — to bring out the sense and balance of the parts, it will be seen that great skill has been exercised in this particular by the classical writers.

Latin expresses the relation of words to each other by inflection, rather than by position, like modern languages. Hence its structure not only admits of great variety in the arrangement of words, but is especially favorable to that form of sentence which is called a Period. In a period, the sense is expressed by the sentence as a whole, and is held in suspense till the delivery of the last word, which usually expresses the main action or motive. A careful attention to examples quoted in the Syntax will show the flexibility and force that can be given to the language in this way.

An English sentence does not often admit this form of structure. It was imitated, sometimes with great skill and beauty, by many of the early writers of English prose; but its effect is better seen in poetry, in such a passage as the following: —

“High on a throne of royal state, which far Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold, Satan exalted sat.”

Paradise Lost, Book II. 1-5.

PART THIRD.

RULES OF VERSE. (PROSODY.)

77. RHYTHM.

The poetry of the ancients was not governed, like modern poetry, by accent and rhyme; but was measured, like music, by the length of the syllables, or vowel sounds. The measured flow of verse is called Rhythm.

Each syllable is considered as either long or short, — in quantity or length, not in quality or sound; a long syllable being reckoned in length equal to two short ones.

The quantity of radical or stem-syllables, as of short a in pāter or of long a in māter, can be learned only by observation or practice, unless determined by the general rules of quantity.

A radical vowel, when not made short or long under the general rules of quantity, is said to be determined by the Authority of the poets.

78. RULES OF QUANTITY.

NOTE. — The Rules of Quantity do not in all cases apply to numerous Greek words, especially proper names, which have been introduced by the Latin poets.

I. GENERAL RULES. (See § 3, p. 3.)

1. A vowel before another vowel is short.

EXAMPLES. via, way; trāho, draw.

EXCEPTIONS. In the genitive form ius, i is common, but has the accent: as in nulli'us, ipsi'us; but it is long in alius (ali'us).

In fio i is long, except when followed by er: as, fiam, fi'ērem.

In the fifth declension, e is long between two vowels: as in diēi; but after a consonant, as in fidēi, it is short.

In many Greek proper names the vowel in Latin represents a long vowel or diphthong, and is consequently long: as in Thalia.

2. A diphthong is long: as in fœdus, cŭl.

Exc. The preposition prae in composition before a vowel is generally short: as in praeustis. — Æn. VII. 524.

4. A vowel formed by contraction is long: as i in nīl for nīhīl; currūs (gen.) for currūs.

4. A vowel before two consonants or a double consonant, also before the letter j, is long: as, māgnus, great; rēx, king; pējor, worse; et ventis ocior, and swifter than winds.

But a short vowel before a mute followed by l or r is common, — that is, it may be long in verse: as in vŏlŭcris, bird.

A short vowel, made long under this rule, is said to be long by Position; as e in dŏcētne. In dŏcēane, the same vowel is long by the special rule (II. 3).

NOTE. — The above rules of Position do not apply to final vowels.

II. FINAL SYLLABLES.

1. Words of one syllable ending in a vowel are long: as, mē, tū, hī, nē.

The attached particles -nē, -quē, -vē, -cē, -ptē, and rē- (rēd-), are short; sē- is long: as, sēcēdit exercītumquē rēdūcit, he withdraws, and leads back the army.

2. Nouns of one syllable are long: as, sŏl, sun; ŏs, mouth; bŏs, ox; vīs, force.

Exc. mēl, honey; ŏs, bone; vīr, man; ŏr, heart; fēl, gall.

3. Final as, es, os, are long: final is, us, ys, are short: as, nēfās, wrong; rupēs, rock; hostis, enemy.

Exc. as is short in some Greek terminations: as, lampădă, torches; and in anas, duck.

es is short in nouns of the third declension (lingual) increasing short: as, hospēs, guest (exc. ăbiēs, ăriēs, păriēs, pēs); in the present of esse; and in the preposition pēnēs.

os is short in compōs, impōs, and some Greek endings.

is in plural cases is long: as in bōnis; also, in the 2d p. sin. pr. ind. active of the fourth conjugation: as audīs; and in sīs, vīs, vēlīs, mālīs, nōlīs; grātīs, fōrīs; and sometimes in -ēris (perf.).

us is long in the gen. sing. and in the plural of the fourth declension: as ăcūs, needles; also in nouns of the third declension which increase long: as virtūs.

4. Most final syllables ending in a consonant except c are short: as, ăd, ăc, ăt, ămăt, ămătŭr.

Exc. dōnēc făc, nēc; nōn, quīn, sīn; crăs, plūs; cŭr, păr.

5. Final a in words declined is short, except in the abl. sing. 1st decl.: as, eă stellă, that star; cum eă stellă, with that star.

In all other words it is long: as, frustră, in vain; vōcă, call.

Exc. ită, so; quă, because; pută, suppose; and, in late use, trīgintă, thirty, etc.

6. Final e is short, except in nouns of the fifth declension; in adverbs formed from adjectives of the first form; and in the imper. sing. 2d. conjugation: as, năvĕ, dŭcĭtĕ, vĕrĕ, mănĕ, fĭdĕ, quărĕ (quă rĕ), hōdiĕ (hōc diĕ), mōnĕ, mōnĕtĕ.

Exc. fămĕ; bĕnĕ, mălĕ; ferĕ, fermĕ; also (rarely), cavĕ, hăbĕ, tăcĕ, vălĕ, vĭdĕ; infernĕ, supernĕ.

7. Final i is long: as, năvī, fīlī, audī. But it is common in mīhi, tībi, sībi, ībi, ŭbi; and short in nīsī, quăsī, cŭī.

8. Final o is common; but long in datives and ablatives; also, usually, in verbs.

Exc. cŭtō, illoc, prŏfectō, dummōdō, imō, egō, duō, octō.

9. Final u is long; final y is short.

III. PENULTIMATE SYLLABLES.

DEFINITION. — A Noun is said to Increase, when in any case it has more syllables than in the nominative singular, which is called the Theme.

Thus stella is said to increase long in the gen. pl., stellārum; and corpus, to increase short in the gen. sing., corpōris.

A Verb is said to increase, when in any part it adds more than one syllable to the root or stem.

Thus vōco is said to increase long in the second person plural, vōcātis; and rēgo to increase short in the second person plural, rēgītis.

The final syllable, added to the root or stem, is called the Termination: as in stell-a, nāv-is, vōc-at, rēg-is.

The syllable added before the termination is called the Increment: as, ā in stellārum, ō in corpōris.

In itīnērībus, amāvērītis, the syllables marked are called the first, second, and third Increments of the noun or verb.

In a few words, the root consists only of a consonant, or combination of consonants, from which the radical vowel has been dropped: as, scīmus, sūmus (ēs).

1. In the Increment of Nouns and Adjectives, a and o are generally long; e, i, u, y, are generally short: as, aetātis, servōrum, hōnōris, ōpēris, carminis, murmūris, pecūdia, ohlam̃ydia.

Exc. ā in baccar (-āris), hēpar (-ātis), jūbar, lār, mās (māris), nectār, pār, sāl, vās (vādis), daps (dāpis); fax, anthrax.

ō in neuters of third declension; also in arbor (-ōris), inops (-ōpis), scrobs (scrōbis); but ōs, ōris.

ē in the fifth declension; also in haeres (-ēdis), lex (lēgis), lōcuples (-ētis), mercēs (-ēdis), plebs (plēbis), quiēs (-ētis), rex (rēgis), vēr (vēris).

i in most nouns and adjectives in ix: as, rādīcis, fēlicis (exc. fīlix, nīx, strīx); also dis (dītis), glis (glīris), lis (lītis), vis (vīres), Quīrites, Samnītes.

ū in lux (lūcis), frux (frūgis); also in forms from nom. in ūs: as, palūdia, tellūris.

2. In the Increment of Verbs (see Tables of Inflection, pp. 34–37), the characteristic vowels are as follows:—

Of the first conjugation ā: as, vōcāre, vōcātur.

Of the second conjugation ē: as, mōnēre, monētur.

Of the third conjugation ē, i: as, rēgēre, regitur.

Of the fourth conjugation i: as, audire, auditur.

Exc. do and its compounds have ā: as, dāre, circumdābat.

In other increments —

ā is always long: as, moneāris, rēgāmus.

ē is long in tense-endings: as, regēbam, audiēbar.

But it is short before ram, rim, ro; and in the personal endings -bēris, -bēre: as, rexerat, rexerit, āmābēris, mōnēbēre.

i is long in forms after the analogy of the fourth conjugation: as, pētīvi, lācessitum.

Also in sīmus, sītis, vēlīmus, and rarely in the terminations -rimus and -ritis; but short in the future of the first and second conjugations: as, vōcābītis.

ō is found only in imperatives, and is always long: as, mōnītōte.

ū is found only in the supine stem and its derivatives, and is always long: as in sōlūtūrus; except in sūmus, fūtūrus, vōlūmus, nōlūmus, mālūmus.

3. Perfects and Supines of two syllables have the stem-syllable long: as, fūgi, vīdi, vīsum, from fūgio, vīdeo.

Exc. bīb- dēd- (do), fīd- (fīndo), scīd- (scīndo), stēt- (sto), stīt- (sisto), tūl- (fēro); cīt- (cīeo), dāt- (do), īt- (eo), līt- (līno), quīt- (queo), rāt- (reor), rūt- (ruo), sāt- (sēro), sīt- (sīno), stāt- (sisto); but stāt- from sto, as in pro-stātum.

4. The root or stem-syllable generally retains its quantity through all the forms derived from it; but when doubled by reduplication (see pp. 33, 39), the first syllable is short: as, tūlit, attūlerat; vīdi, vidērit; cādo, cēcīdīt; caedo, cēcīdīt.

Exc. dīco (dīc-), dūco (dūc-), fīsus (fīd-); and some increments of nouns: as, lēgis (lēg-), vōcis (vōc-).

5. The following terminations are preceded by a long vowel:—

I. -al, -ar: as, vectīgal, pulvīnar.

Exc. ānīmal, cāpītal, jūbar.

II. -brum, -crum, -trum: as, lāvācrum, dēlūbrum, vērātrum.

III. -do, -ga, -go: as, formīdo, aurīga, Imāgo.

Exc. cādo, divīdo, ēdo, mōdo, sōlīdo, spādo, trēpīdo; calīga, fūga, tōga, plāga; āgo, ēgo, tēgo, nēgo, rēgo.

IV. -le, -les, -lis: as, ancīle, mīles, crūdēlis, hostīlis.

Exc. māle; indōles, sūbōles; grācīlis, hūmīlis, sīmīlis, stērīlis; and verbal adjectives in īlis: as, amābīlis, dōcīlis, faciīlis.

V. -ma, -men, -mentum: as, poēma, flūmen, jūmentum.

Exc. ānīma, lacrīma, victīma; tāmen, colūmen; with rēgīmen and the like from verb-stems.

VI. -mus, -nus, -rus, -sus, -tus: as, extrēmus, sūpīnus, octōni, sēvērus, fūmōsus, pērītus.

Exc. (a.) I before -mus: as, finītīmus, mārītīmus (except bīmus, trīmus, quadrīmus, opīmus, mīmus, līmus); and in superlatives (except īmus, prīmus); dōmus, hūmus, nēmus, cālāmus, thālāmus.

(b.) I before -nus: as in crastīnus, fraxīnus and the like (except mātūtīnus, vespertīnus, rēpentīnus); āsīnus, cōmīnus, ēmīnus, dōmīnus, faciīnus, prōtīnus, termīnus, vātīcīnus; mānus, oōeānus, plātānus; gēnus; bōnus, ōnus, sōnus.

(c.) ē before -rus: as, mērus, hēdēra (except prōcērus, sincērus, sēvērus); also barbārus, chōrus, nūrus, pīrus; sātīra, amphōra, anoōra, lŷra, purpūra; fōrum, pārūm.

(d.) lātus, mētus, vētus, dīgītus, servītus, spīrītus; quōtus, tōtus; hābītus, and the like.

VII. -na, -ne, -nis: as, carīna, māne, inānis.

Exc. advēna, dōmīna, femīna, mächīna, mīna, gēna, pāgīna; bēne, sīne; cānis, cīnis, jūvēnis.

VIII. -re, -ris, -ta, -tis: as, altāre, sālūtāris, mōnēta, im-mītis.

Exc. māre, hīlāris, rōta, nōta, sītis, pōtis, and most nouns in -ita.

IX. -tim, -tum, and syllables beginning with v: as, privā-tim, quercētum, ōlīva.

Exc. affātim, stātim; nīvis (nix); brēvis, grāvis, lēvis (light); nōvus, nōvem; and several verb-roots: as, jūvo, fāveo.

X. -dex, -lex, -mex, -rex, -dix, -nix, and the numeral endings -ginti, -gintā: as, jūdex, īlex.

Exc. cūlex, sīlex, rūmex.

6. The following terminations are preceded by a short vowel: —

I. -cus, -dus, -lus: as, rustīcus, cālīdus, glādiōlus.

Exc. ōpācus, āmicus; aprīcus, ficus, mendīcus, pūdicus; fidus, nīdus, sīdus; and ū before -dus: as, crūdus, nūdus; ē before -lus, as phāsēlus (except gēlus, scēlus); āsīlus; lūcus.

II. -no, -nor, -ro, -ror, in verbs: as, destīno, crīmīnor, gēro, quēror.

Exc. festīno, prōpīno, sāgīno, ōpīnor, inclīno; dēclāro, spēro, spīro, ōro, dūro, mīror.

III. -ba, -bo, -pa, -po: as, fāba, bībo, lūpa, crēpo.

Exc. glēba, scrība; būbo, nūbo, scrībo; pāpa, pūpa, rīpa, scōpa, stūpa; cāpo, rēpo, stīpo.

IV. -tas (in nouns), -ter and -tus (in adverbs): as, cīvī-tas, fortīter, penītus.

The above rules and exceptions cover most Latin words in common use; omitting a few Greek forms, as crātēr, cōma.

79. FEET.

The most natural division of musical time is into intervals, consisting of either two or three equal parts. In music, this is called double or triple time.

These intervals are in music called Measures; in prosody, they are called Feet; and the parts are indicated by the number or length of the syllables of which the feet consist.

The feet most frequently employed in Latin poetry, with their musical notation, are the following: —

OF TWO SYLLABLES.

|----|---------------|--|--|--|-------------------------------------|
| 1. | $\frac{2}{8}$ | | | | Pyrrhic : as, lāpīs. |
| 2. | $\frac{3}{8}$ | | | | Trochee (choree): as, cārūs. |
| 3. | $\frac{8}{8}$ | | | | Iambus : as, bōnōs. |
| 4. | $\frac{2}{4}$ | | | | Spondee : as, vēntōs. |

OF THREE SYLLABLES.

- | | | | | | | | |
|-----|---------------|--|--|--|--|--|--|
| 5. | $\frac{2}{4}$ | | | | | | Dactyl : as, āttūlīt. |
| 6. | $\frac{2}{4}$ | | | | | | Anapaest : as, dōmīnōs. |
| 7. | $\frac{2}{4}$ | | | | | | Amphibrach : as, vīdētīs. |
| 8. | $\frac{3}{8}$ | | | | | | Tribrach : as, hōmīnīs. |
| 9. | $\frac{3}{4}$ | | | | | | Molossus : as, dūxērūt (rare). |
| 10. | | | | | | | Amphimācer (Cretic): as, ēgērānt. |
| 11. | | | | | | | Bacchius : as, rēgēbānt. |

Feet of four syllables are combinations of those of two. The following only require special notice.

- | | | | | | | | | | |
|-----|---------------|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|
| 12. | $\frac{3}{4}$ | | | | | | | | Choriambus : as, cōntūlērānt. |
| 13. | $\frac{3}{4}$ | | | | | | | | Greater Ionic : as, cōnjēcērāt. |
| 14. | $\frac{3}{4}$ | | | | | | | | Lesser Ionic : as, rētūlissēnt. |

The first, second, third, or fourth Epitritus has a short syllable in the first, second, third, or fourth place, with three long syllables.

The first, second, third, or fourth Paeon has a long syllable in the first, second, third, or fourth place, with three short syllables.

NOTE. — Narrative poetry was written for rhythmical recitation, or chant; and Lyrical poetry for rhythmical melody, or music, often to be accompanied by measured movements, or dance. But in reading, it is not usual to keep the strict measure of time; and often the accent is substituted for rhythm, as in prose.

The accented syllable of each foot is called the Arsis ; and the unaccented part, the Thesis.

Accent, in prosody, is called Ictus, — that is, the beat of the foot, as in dancing.

A rhetorical pause occurring within the limits of a verse is called Cæsu'ra.

The position in the verse of the principal Cæsura is important, as affecting the melody or rhythm. It usually falls in hexameter after the Arsis, or accented syllable, of the third or fourth foot in the verse. Any break in a foot is often called Cæsura.

NOTE. — In modern poetry, even in modern Greek, quantity is disregarded, and the names of ancient feet are applied to combinations of accented and unaccented syllables. Thus fully and foolish are both called Trochees, although the quantity of fully is $\sim \sim$; so impel and impale are both called Iambs. It is difficult, therefore, to imitate well in modern verse those Latin metres which contain two or three long syllables in succession, because accents seldom come naturally on successive syllables.

Owing to this disregard of quantity by the modern ear, the easiest way for a modern reader to get a peculiar melody from Latin verse is to accent (in verse) every long syllable, and no short one. Thus as prose the second verse of "Integer Vitæ" would be accented thus : —

"non éget Máuris jáculis néque árcu :"

while in poetry it is to be accented thus : —

"nón egét Máurís jaculís nequ' árcu," like the free rendering in English : —

"néedeth nóť bóť, spéar, nor a ráttling quíver."

80. SCANNING.

A single line in poetry is called a Verse.

To divide the verse in reading into its appropriate feet, according to the rules of quantity and versification, is called Scanning, — that is, a climbing, or advance by steps.

A verse lacking a syllable at the beginning is called Acephalous ; lacking a syllable at the end it is called Catalectic.

NOTE. — It is recommended that the student should habitually scan every verse he meets in the course of his study. In reading or recitation, while the prose accent should be retained, the flow of the verse may be in some degree preserved by due attention to the rules of quantity. This is called Metrical Reading.

In scanning, a vowel or diphthong at the end of a word — sometimes even at the end of a verse — is dropped, when the next word begins with a vowel or with h. This is called Synalœpha, or Elision; or, at the end of a verse, Synapheia.

A final m, with the preceding vowel, is dropped in like manner. This is called Ecthlipsis.

Hence a final syllable in m is generally reckoned to have no quantity of its own; its vowel, in any case, being either elided or else made long by position.

Elision is sometimes omitted when the final syllable has a special emphasis, or is succeeded by a pause. This is called Hiatus.

A final syllable, regularly short, is sometimes lengthened before a pause. It is then said to be long by Cæsura.

The last syllable of any verse may be indifferently long or short.

81. METRE.

Metre is a regular combination of feet in verse, and is named from its most frequent or ruling foot, as Dactylic, Iambic, Trochaic, Anapæstic.

The ruling foot, so called, always consists of a combination of long and short syllables, and is therefore never a pyrrhic or spondee.

A Verse consists of a given number of feet arranged metrically. It is named from the number of feet it contains, as Hexameter, Trimeter.

A Stanza consists of a definite number of verses ranged in a fixed order. It is often called from the name of some favorite poet, as Sapphic, Alcaic, Horatian.

82. FORMS OF VERSE.

The most common forms of Latin verse are these : —

I. The Dactylic Hexameter, called also Heroic verse, used in narrative and pastoral poetry. It consists of six feet, of which the last is always a Spondee, the fifth generally a Dactyl, and the rest indifferently spondees or dactyls.

When the fifth foot is a spondee, the verse is called Spondaic.

The introductory verses of the Æneid, divided according to the foregoing rules, will be as follows, the principal Cæsura in each verse being marked by double lines : —

armā vī|rūmqvē cā|nō || Trō|jæ quī | primūs āb | ōris
Itāl|ām fā|tō prōfū|gūs || Lā|vināquē | vēnīt
Itōrā, | mūlt' ill' | ēt tēr|rīs || jā|ctātūs ēt | āltō
vī sūpē|rūm sae|vae || mēmō|rēm Jū|nōnis ōb | iram ;
mūltā quō|qu' ēt bēl|lō pās|sūs || dūm | cōndēret | urbem,
infēr|rētquē dē|ōs Lātī|ō, || gēnīs | ūndē Lā|tinum
Albā|niquē pā|trēs, || āt|qu' āltæ | moenīā | Rōmæ.

The Hexameter verse has been illustrated in English thus : —

"Strongly it | bears us a|long, in | swelling and | limitless | billows, Nothing be|fore and | nothing be|hind, but the | sky and the | ocean."

II. Dactylic Pentameter : consisting of five feet, and used alternately with the Hexameter, to form the Elegiac stanza. It is usually divided, in scanning, into two half verses, of which the latter always has two dactyls, and each ends in a single long syllable, or half-foot : as,

cūm sūbīt | illī|ūs trīs|tissimā | nōctīs ī|māgo
quā mīhī | sūprē|mūm || tēmpūs īn | urbē fū|xt, cūm rēpē|tō nō|ctēm quā | tōt mīhī | cārā rē|liquit,
lābītūr | ēx ōcū|līs || nūnc quōquē | gūttā mē|is.
jām prōpē | lūx ādē|rāt, quā | mē dīs|cēdērē | Cæsār
fīnībūs | ēxtrē|mae || jūssērāt | Ausōnī|æ.

Ov. TRIST. I. EL. 3, 1-6.

The Elegiac Stanza has been illustrated thus : —

"In the hex|ameter | rises the | fountain's | silvery | column,
In the pent|ameter | still || falling in | melody | back."

III. Iambic Trimeter (senarius) : consisting of three measures, each containing a double Iambus. In the first half-measure a spondee or anapæst is often substituted for the iambus; and other substitutions are occasionally used. This verse is used chiefly in dramatic dialogue.

In the following example, it alternates with the Iambic Dimeter, which consists of two similar double feet :—

bēātūs il|lē quī prōcūl | nēgōtīs,
 ūt prīscā gēns | mōrtālīum,
 pātērnā rū|rā būbūs ēx|ercēt sūis,
 sōlūtūs ō|mnī fēnore, . . .
 fōrūmqūē vī|tāt ēt sup̄er|bā cīvīum
 pōtēntio|rūm līmīnā.

HOR. EPOD. II. 1-8.

IV. Alcaic Strophe, or Stanza : consisting of four verses. The first two verses (greater Alcaic) have for their base each five Iambuses, for the first and third of which a spondee is substituted, and for the fourth an anapæst; the third verse is the same, but with one complete and one half iambus in the last two feet; the fourth verse consists of two anapæsts and an iambus, preceded and followed by a single syllable, or half-foot : as, .

jūst' āo | tēnā|cēm prō|pōsītī | vīrum
 nōn oī|vī ār|dōr prā|vā jūbēn|tīum
 'nōn vūl|tīs īn|stāntīs | tŷrān|nī
 mēn|tē quātīt | sōlīdā | nēqu' au|stēr.

Id. OD. III. 3, 1-4.

Or, the first verse may be divided into a spondee, bacchius, and two dactyls; the second into a spondee, bacchius, and two trochees; and the third into two dactyls and two trochees.

V. Sapphic Stanza : consisting of three Sapphic verses and one Adonic.

The base of the Sapphic verse is five Trochees, for the second of which a spondee, and for the third a dactyl, is substituted.

The Adonic verse consists simply of a dactyl and spondee (or Trochee) : as,

jām sā|tīs tēr|rīs nīvīs | ātquē | dīrae
grāndī|nis mī|sīt pātēr | ēt rū|bēntē dēxtē|rā sā|crās jācū|lātūs | ārcēs tērrūit | ūrbem.

Id. Od. I. 2, 1-4.

Or, the Sapphic verse may be regarded as consisting of a Trochee, Spondee, Choriambus, and Bacchius.

VI. Lesser Asclepiadic : consisting of a spondee, two choriambus, and an iambus : as,

Maecō|nas ātāvīs | ēdītē rē|gībūs
O ēt | praesīdī ēt | dūlcē dēcūs | mēum.

Id. Od. I. 1. 1, 2.

VII. This verse is often joined with the Glyconic (the same as the above, omitting one choriambus), making the First Asclepiadic Stanza : as,

Rōmae | princīpīs ūr|bīum
dīgnā|tūr sūbōlēs | intēr āmā|bīlēs
vātūm | pōnērē mē | chōrōs ;
ēt jān | dēntē mīnūs | mōrdēōr īn|vīdo.

Id. Od. IV. 3, 13-16.

VIII. Or, three Asclepiadics with one Glyconic, making the Second Asclepiadic Stanza : as,

audīs | quō strēpītu | jānūā quō | nēmūs
intēr | pūlchrā sātūm | tēctā rēmū|gīāt
vēntīs | ēt pōsītās | ūt glācīēt | nīvēs
pūrō | nūmīnē Jū|pītēr.

Id. Od. III. 10, 5-8.

IX. Or, two Asclepiadics are joined with one Pherecratic (the same with the Glyconic, lacking one syllable) and one Glyconic, making the Third Asclepiadic stanza : as,

hic bēl|lūm lācrīmō|s' hīc mīsērām | fāmēm
pēstēm|qu' ā pōpūl' ēt | princīpē Cae|sār' īn
Pērsās | ātquē Brītān|nōs
vēstrā | mōtūs āgēt | prēcē.

Id. Od. III. 21, 13-16.

The above forms include upwards of a hundred of the Odes of Horace. In the eighteen not included, he employs twelve different kinds of stanzas, most of which are combinations of the verses already given. They may be briefly indicated as follows : —

1. Choriambic Pentameter (Greater Asclepiadic) :

tū nē | quacalōris | scīrē nēfās | quēm mīhī quēm | tibi
(Od. I. 11, 18; IV. 10.)

2. Hexameter, followed by the last four feet of an hexameter. — (Od. I. 7, 28; Epod. 12.)

3. Hexameter, followed by Iambic Dimeter. — Epod. 14, 15.

4. Trimeter Iambic alone. — Epod. 17.

5. Choriambic Dimeter and Tetrameter : as,

Lŷdīā dīc | pēr ōmnes
tē dēōs ō|rō Sŷbārīn | cūr prōpērās | āmāndo. — Od. I. 8.

6. Hexameter, followed by Iambic Trimeter. — Epod. 16.

7. Verse of four Lesser Ionics. — Od. III. 12.

8. Hexameter with Dactylic Penthemim (five half-feet) :

dīfū|gērē nī|vēs rēdē|ūnt jām | grāmīnā | cāmpīs
ārborī|būsquē cō|mae. — Od. IV. 7.

9. Iambic Trimeter; Dactylic Penthemim; Iambic Dimeter. — Epod. 11.

10. Hexameter; Iambic Dimeter; Dactylic Penthemim. — Ep. 13.

11. Archilochian Heptameter; Iambic Trimeter catalectic : as, sōlvītūr | ācrīs hī|ēms grā|tā vīcē | vērīs | ēt fā|vōnī

trāhūnt|quē sīc|cās mā|chīnae | cārī|nas. — Od. I. 4.

12. Iambic Dimeter and Trimeter, each imperfect : as,

nōn | ēbūr | nēqu' au|rēum
mēā | rēnī|dēt īn | dōmō | lācū|nar. — Od. II. 18.

In dramatic dialogue, the Trochaic Tetrameter catalectic, or Septenarius, is very often used, consisting regularly of fifteen syllables, — the same with the 8's and 7's of the common ballad measure, — usually with various irregularities : as, ād t'advēnio spēm salūtem cōnsili' aūxili' ēxpētens.

TER. ANDR. II. 1, 18.

83. RECKONING OF TIME. (See § 56, I. 4.)

The year was dated, in earlier times, by the names of the consuls; but was afterwards reckoned from the building of the city, the date of which was assigned by Varro to B.C. 753. In order, therefore, to reduce Roman dates to those of the Christian era, the year of the city is to be subtracted from 754; e.g. A.U.C. 708 = B.C. 46.

The first day of each month was called Kalendæ, from cālāre, to call; that being the day on which the priests publicly announced the new moon in the Cōmītia Cālāta, which they did, originally, after actual observation. Sixteen days before this, that is, on the fifteenth day of March, May, July, and October, but the thirteenth of the other months, came the Idus, or day of the full moon; eight days before the Ides were the Nonæ. The month was thus divided into three weeks of eight days, and one of five or seven. The days were reckoned backward from these points; but as it was the custom of the Romans always to include the point of departure in such calculations, it is necessary, in order to find the day of the month, to take this into account. Thus, the day before the Kalends, Ides, &c., is called Pridie Kalendas, &c.; the day before this, ante diem (a. d.) tertium Kalendas, &c. Therefore, with the Kalends, two must be added to the number of days of the preceding month; with the Nones and Ides, one must be added to the day of the month on which they occur; and the day of the date must be taken from the number thus obtained. E. g. the sixth day before the Kalends of November: 31 (the number of days of October) $+ 2 = 33$; $33 - 6 = 27$. The date will be Oct. 27. — The third day before the Ides of March: $15 + 1 = 16$; $16 - 3 = 13$. March 13.

84. RECKONING OF MONEY. (See § 14.)

The money of the Romans was in early times wholly copper, the unit being the As. This was nominally a pound, but actually somewhat less, in weight, and was divided into twelve Unciae. In the 3d cent. B.C. the as was reduced by degrees to one-twelfth of its original value. At the same time silver coins were introduced; the Denarius = 10 asses, and the Sestertius, or Sesterce (semis tertius, represented by IIS, or HS, = duo et semis) = 2½ asses. The sestertius, being probably introduced at a time when it was equal in value to the original as, came to be used as the unit (hence nummus was used as equivalent to sestertius); afterwards, by the reductions in the standard, four asses became equal to a sesterce. Gold was introduced later, the aureus being equal to one hundred sesterces. — Sestertium (M.) = 1000 sestertii was used as an expression of value, not as a coin.

In the statement of sums of money in cipher, a line above the number indicated thousands; lines at the sides also, hundred-thousands. Thus HS. DC. = 600 sestertii. HS. DC. = 600,000 sestertii, or 600 sestertia. HS. [DC] = 60,000,000 sestertii. With the numeral adverb, hundred-thousands are also understood: as, decies, decies HS., or decies sestertium, that is, decies centena milia sestertium, or ten times a hundred sestertia = 1,000,000 sestertii.

SUPPLEMENT.

NOTE.—The following pages are designed for the use of Teachers. The earlier ones, taken from “Latin Lessons,” may be found convenient in the exercises of the class-room; while those which follow, including the sections on Inflection and Classification, will aid in giving a view of the structure of the language, valuable to the teacher, and indirectly of service to the pupil.

1. On the Method of Teaching Latin.

I. PRELIMINARY INSTRUCTION.

THE pupil should learn thoroughly the introductory matter contained in the first seven sections of the Grammar, omitting the smaller type. If thought desirable, he may commit to memory all the illustrative examples, which should be carefully analyzed and explained by the teacher.

Thus, in the first example (§ 7), pater meus adest: the terminations er, us are nominative case-endings of the third and second declensions; the word pater, if pronounced with the Italian sound of the vowels, and a little thickening of the consonants, becomes the English father,—which was actually formed in this way, and is nearly the same word in Sanscrit, Greek, Latin, German, and English; the syllable me is the same as the English, and, with the adjective-ending, signifies my; est is es—(the same as the English is)—with t the sign of the third person; ad is the English at, meaning to or near; so that the whole sentence is, my father is-at-hand.

In the second example, patris ejus amicus miseretur mei: is and jus (ius) are genitive-endings of the third and second declensions; amicus has the same root as the English amicable (friendly); miseretur has the passive or reflective termination, tur, with the same root which is found in the English mercy, also in miserable; and in mei we have the word me with the genitive-ending; so that the sentence is, his father's friend has-mercy on me.

In the third example, dedit mihi cultellum; magno mihi usui erat: the doubled consonant in dedit (as in the English did) is sign of the past tense, and means gave; mihi has the dative-ending i with the root me (mi); the Latin culter is the English coulter (the cutting part of a plough), and means a cutting instrument — cultellus being the diminutive (a little knife), having here the accusative-ending um; magno and usui have the dative-ending of the second and fourth declensions, signifying the purpose or end (see § 51, VII.); and erat has, with the root ēs, or ē, the termination of the imperfect; so that the sentence is, he gave me a little-knife: it was of great use to me.

The teacher will illustrate in like manner the remaining examples. He may, however, at his discretion, defer this analysis till the review.

It will be the care of the teacher to make clear to the mind of the pupil those usages in Latin — such as the distinctions of gender, number, and case by inflection — which have little or nothing to correspond in English. The time that this will occupy will vary with the age and capacity of the scholars.

They should be taught also what the Latin language is, when it was spoken, by whom and where; they should be informed of the wealth of Latin literature, and the practical usefulness of the language in modern times. Their attention should further be drawn to the words in English which are derived from Latin (as in the cases analyzed above); and this may be illustrated from any other language known to the pupil. It is very desirable that, as new Latin words are introduced, the pupil should be taught to search for English words from the same root.

II. DEFINITIONS.

Nouns, Adjectives, Pronouns, Verbs, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections are called PARTS OF SPEECH. There is no Article in Latin.

A NOUN is the name of any thing: as, hōmo, man; nāvis, ship.

If a noun is the name of a person, or of a thing spoken of by its own name, as if it were a person, it is a Proper Noun; if not, it is á Common Noun. Thus in the sentence Roma magna est urbs, Rome is a vast city, Roma is a proper, and urbs a common noun.

An ADJECTIVE is a word used to define a quality: as, cārus, dear; bōnus, good.

Comparison shows the degree of the quality: as,

POSITIVE.	COMPARATIVE.	SUPERLATIVE.
cārus , dear .	carior , dearer .	carissimus , dearest .
bōnus , good .	mēlior , better .	optīmus , best .

A PRONOUN is a word used instead of a noun: as, he for the man.

The First Person, ēgō, I, nōs, we, is the person speaking; the Second Person, tū, vōs, you, is the one spoken to; the Third Person, he, she, it, they, is that spoken of, and has no personal pronoun in Latin, Demonstratives being often used instead.

A Demonstrative denotes a particular person or thing: as, hic, this, ille, that.

A Relative refers to a person or thing before spoken of: as, qui, who, quōd, which.

The person or thing referred to is called the Antecedent: as, hōmo qui vēnit, the man who came.

An Interrogative asks a question: as, quis adest? who is here? ūbīnam gentium sūmus? where in the world are we?

A VERB is a word which tells an action or condition: as, vēni, I came, cēcīdīt, he fell.

Mood denotes the manner of an action: as, vēni, I came (Indicative); vēni, come! (Imperative).

Tense denotes the time of an action: as, currit, he runs (Present); cūcurrit, he ran (Past).

Of Voices, the Active speaks of a person doing the action: as, fērit, he strikes; the Passive, as suffering it: as, fēritur, he is struck.

A PARTICIPLE expresses the action, etc., of a verb in the form of an adjective: as, fēriens, striking; ictus, struck.

An ADVERB is a word which qualifies the meaning of adjectives or verbs: as, ācerīmē fērit, he strikes very hard.

A PREPOSITION is a word which expresses the relations between other words: as, in oppidum vēnit, he came to town; pro patriā mōri, to die for one's country.

A CONJUNCTION is a word which connects other words or sentences: as, prōcērus et vālidus, tall and strong.

INTERJECTIONS are exclamations: as, heus! Halloo!

GENDER is distinction as to sex, and is Masculine of male creatures: as, rex, king; Feminine of female creatures: as, rēgina, queen; neuter of things: as, sōlium, throne.

Things without sex are Neuter in English: as, stone, tree. But in Latin they are frequently masculine or feminine: as, lāpis, stone (masc.); arbor, tree (fem.). This is called Grammatical Gender.

NUMBER signifies how many, and is Singular when one is spoken of: as, vīr, man; Plural when more than one: as, vīri, men.

CASE is the form a noun takes to show its relation to other words: as, puēri currunt, the boys run (Nominative); puēri sōror, the boy's sister (Genitive).

This relation is generally shown in English by prepositions: as, gesta Romanorum, the deeds of the Romans; invidia mihi, envy against me.

QUANTITY is the time taken in pronouncing a vowel or a syllable, in comparison with other syllables.

Thus in the word strengthen, the first syllable is long and the second short in quantity or time, though they are both called short in quality or sound; in submit, the first is long and the second short, in quantity, though the latter has the accent.

Quantity is reckoned much more important in Latin than in English, and often shows the difference in the meaning of words. Thus lēvis (long e) means smooth; lēvis (short e), means light; ocēdidit is he fell; ocēdidit, he cut or felled.

EMPHASIS is stress of voice on an important word or phrase: as, cowards run; but brave men stand.

ACCENT is stress of voice on a particular syllable: as, the necessary reserves.

A PROCLITIC is a word without accent of its own, that seems to lean on the word after it; an ENCLITIC is one that seems to lean on the word before it.

Thus in the sentence, The boys, and girls too, are here, — the is a proclitic, and too an enclitic.

In Latin, the enclitics que, and, ve, or, ne, whether, and sometimes cum, with, are written as part of the preceding word. Thus in Latin, the sentence given above would be, puēri puellaeque adsunt.

For Definitions in Syntax, see § 43.

III. PRONUNCIATION.

It is rather more than a thousand years since Latin has been familiarly spoken in common use, though it still continues to be the language of scholars in some places, and is very extensively used in the services and in all official documents of the Roman church. It is, however, not regarded anywhere now as a living tongue; and its correct ancient pronunciation is uncertain. In schools and universities of different countries, it is generally pronounced in the way nearest to the native tongue of each. In particular, there are two methods practised among us, known as the English and the Continental, between which the teacher is expected to make his choice.

1. The English Method.

The following directions may be given to those who pronounce Latin in the English method:—

1. Form the habit of a clear, accurate, and neat articulation, with careful attention to the rules of Quantity and Accent (§§ 3, 4), — especially to the Quantity of Penultimate syllables, as given in § 78, III.

2. In the division of syllables, the English method adopts the following exceptions to the rule given in § 1:—

a. A single consonant after any accented vowel in the antepenult except u is joined with it: as, mon'itus, lu'cibus.

But not with a, e, o, when the single consonant, or a mute with l or r, is followed by two vowels, the first of which is e, i, or y: as, mo'neo, pa'tria.

b. In all other cases, two consonants between two vowels are separated: as, mag'nus, pat'ribus.

3. An accented vowel at the end of a syllable has its long English sound; every vowel followed by a consonant in the same syllable is sounded short: as, mā'nē, mǎ'nē (pronounced alike), harp̄'ia, mō'neo, mon'itum.

Final a is sounded as in the last syllable of America. In tībi and sībi, i has its short sound, as in hit. In post and its compounds postea, postquam, o has the long sound, as in the similar English word; but in postēri, etc., it is short.

3. The Diphthongs ae, oe have the sound of e: that is, long in caelum, amoe'nus; short in hae'sīto, amoe'nitas.

In poetry, ei may be regarded as a diphthong, as in dein'de, having the sound of i in mind; eu in Orpheus, etc., as in feud.

When ui is pronounced as a diphthong, it has the long sound of i; thus cui, huic, are pronounced ki, hike.

4. Consonants have generally the same power as in English. Thus, before e, i, y, and the diphthongs ae, eu, oe, c has the sound of s, and g of j.

h is not reckoned as a consonant in Latin.

5. Where a combination of syllables in Latin is similar to that familiar in English words, it is common to give it the same sound as in English. Thus, in natio, martius, mentio, and (more doubtfully) concio, t or c may have the sound of sh. So, too, rarely, with s or x, as in Asia, anxius.

But where the word is distinctly foreign to us, or the combination of syllables is less familiar, it is better to retain the pure consonant sound; as in mentīō'tur, Min'cius, ca'du'ceus, Ly'sias, axiō'ma, noctūm.

6. It is very common in English pronunciation, to slur or suppress the more difficult consonant sounds, particularly in such cases as on, gn, ps, pt, tm, or x, at the beginning of a word; as in Cnidus, gnotus, pseudo-, pteris, Tmolus, xylon. But, in an accurate pronunciation of these, as Latin or Greek words, the full consonant sound will be retained.

Finally, there can be no correct rule to authorize the slipshod and slovenly habit of enunciation which is frequently allowed. To cultivate a clear and vigorous utterance of unfamiliar words, is one of the incidental benefits of careful instruction in a foreign tongue.

II. The Continental Method.

In many parts of the country, the Continental system has been adopted, either wholly or in part. This has the obvious advantage of bringing our pronunciation of Latin into harmony with that of the great majority of educated persons, and of coming nearer the actual pronunciation of the ancients. We can only approach to this, as it is not possible to decide in all points what it was; and, if it were possible, it is likely that it would sound too strange and foreign to obtain adoption.

Thus, in all probability, c and g were always pronounced hard, j and v like y and w, and u like oo. For example, juvĕnes vicinārum urbium (the youths of the neighboring cities) would be pronounced yu'wenace wekenar'oom oor'beoom.

And besides, the distinction between long and short vowels must be observed, like time in music, each long syllable occupying double the time of a short one in pronouncing, — as in pā'ter, mā'ter, sō'lis (from sōlus), sō'lis (from sōl), — a distinction nearly or quite impossible to English speech.

Neither is the usage of Continental scholars uniform, since each follows the analogy of his own language; so that there is considerable variance, especially in the sounds of the Consonants.

For example, ce and ci, or ti before a vowel, are frequently (following the custom of most German schools) pronounced tse: thus, cedo is tse'do, and otium, o' tseoom. But it is doubtful whether this has any authority in the usage of the Romans.

Some, again, following the Italian, would pronounce c before e or i like ch in choose, and give z the sharp sound of ts.

Others are of opinion that qu should be pronounced like k, and cu like qu in English: thus qui (nom.) would have the sound of ke, and cui (dat.) of que. But in Italian, q (as in qui, qua,) is always sounded as with us.

To those who prefer the Continental method, and desire at the same time to make it familiar and easy to the learner, the following rules are recommended: —

1. Practise carefully the pure Italian sounds of the Vowels (§ 2, near the end); remembering that the mixed sound, or "vanish" characteristic of English vowels (as of u in rebuke, fortune), is never heard in the Italian, where each vowel represents a single sound, u being always like oo in moon, or u in full.

2. For the Consonants, follow the directions given above for pronouncing in the English method, — for example, making t always distinct and hard: as, Mar-ti-us, not Marshus.

3. It will greatly aid in giving the pure pronunciation to the vowels, to divide the syllables as in § 1 at the end: thus, dō'mī-nus ma'gnus re'xērat, a great lord had ruled.

But this rule does not apply to compound words, in which the words compounded are separated in the division by syllables: as, ab-lent, ob-latus.

4. In Diphthongs, the sounds of the separate vowels should be preserved: thus au will have nearly the sound of ou in loud; and ae of ei in height. But ae and oe, which are often interchanged with ē, may have the same sound if preferred.

5. In languages derived from Latin, Accent is much less strongly marked than in English. Hence it is often well to indicate quantity rather than accent, where it can be done without offending an English ear, — especially in syllables long by position (§ 78, I. 4), as in immensus.

The following rules of Accent, in addition to those given in § 4, are sanctioned by some of the best authorities:—

1. When an Enclitic is joined to a word, the accent falls on the syllable next before the enclitic, whether long or short: thus, dēā'que, āmārē've, tībī'ne?

2. If the vowel of the Penult is short, i or u coming immediately before it is to be regarded as a semi-vowel, and pronounced like y or w, the accent going back to the syllable before: as, mū'liēres, mō'nuērat, ō'ceānus, fī'liōlus.

But in compounds, the accent will not be thrown back of the radical syllable: thus, im-pī'ētas, ab-fu'ērat.

2. Principles of Inflection and Classification.

I. ROOTS AND STEMS.

1. Every inflected word consists of two parts,—the Root or Stem, and the Termination.

The Root is regarded as a primitive element of speech. It is usually a Monosyllable, of not more than three letters, ending in a consonant. Examples of Latin roots are the following:

ācu-, sharpen.	fīg-, shape.	mōn-, warn.	serp-, creep.
āg-, drive.	fīc-, bend.	mōr-, die.	serv-, keep.
āl-, rear, feed.	fīt-, flow.	mōv-, move.	sīd-, sink.
ang-, choke.	fōd-, dig.	mūt-, change.	sīl-, be silent.
ard-, blaze.	fōv-, cherish.	nāc-, win.	sist-, set firm.
aug-, increase.	frāg-, break.	nēc-, link, join.	solv-, loosen.
bīb-, drink.	fūd-, pour.	nīt-, shine.	sōn-, sound.
cād-, fall.	fūg-, flee.	nōc-, harm.	sta-, set, stand.
caed-, cut.	fulg-, flash.	ōr-, rise.	strēp-, resound.
cāl-, get hot.	gaud-, rejoice.	pāg-, fix.	strīg-, grasp.
cān-, sing.	gēr-, carry.	pand-, spread.	stru-, pile.
cāp-, take.	gēm-, groan.	pār-, produce.	suād-, urge.
cār-, lack.	gēn-, produce.	pās-, feed.	tāc-, be still.
carp-, pluck.	gno-, know.	pēl-, push.	tāg-, touch.
cēd-, yield.	hāb-, have.	pend-, hang.	tēg-, cover.
cing-, gird.	haer-, stick.	pēt-, seek.	tēn-, stretch.
clūd-, shut.	haur-, draw.	pīg-, paint.	tēr-, rub.
cōl-, till.	jāc-, throw.	plāc-, approve.	terg-, wipe.
cōq-, cook.	jūg-, yoke.	plāg-, strike.	tex-, weave.
crē-, grow.	lāb-, slip.	pōs-, put.	tīg-, stain.
crēd-, believe.	laed-, hurt.	posc-, demand.	tīm-, fear.
cūb-, lie down.	lang-, droop.	prem-, press.	tōl-, raise.
cūp-, desire.	lāt-, be hid.	quaer-, seek.	tōr-, twist.
cūr-, run.	lāv-, wash.	quāt-, shake.	trah-, drag.
dā-, put, give.	lax-, loosen.	rād-, scrape.	trēm-, quiver.
dīc-, say.	lēg-, gather.	rāp-, seize.	trūd-, thrust.
dōc-, teach.	līb-, like.	rēg-, straighten.	tūm-, swell.
dōl-, ache, pain.	līc-, permit.	rēp-, creep.	ūr-, burn.
dōm-, tame.	līg-, bind.	rīd-, laugh.	urg-, press.
dūc-, lead.	līq-, quit.	rōd-, gnaw.	ūt-, use.
ēd-, eat.	lōq-, talk.	rū-, rush.	vāl-, be strong.
ēm-, take, buy.	lūc-, get light.	rūp-, burst.	vāl-, pluck.
fā-, say.	lūd-, play.	sāl-, leap.	vert-, turn.
fāc-, do.	lūg-, mourn.	scand-, climb.	vi-, force.
fāl-, cheat.	mān-, wait.	sci-, know.	vīc-, conquer.
fāt-, confess.	mēd-, heal.	scīd-, tear.	vīd-, see.
fāv-, wish well.	mēr-, earn.	sēc-, cut.	vīv-, live.
fēr-, bear.	mīn-, lessen.	sēd-, sit.	vōl-, wish.
ferv-, boil.	misc-, mix.	sēq-, follow.	vōl-, fly.
fīd-, split.	mīt-, let go.	sēr-, put, sow.	volv-, roll.

The Stem is sometimes the same with the Root: as in dūc-is, rēg-o; but is more frequently formed from the root, either by lengthening its vowel, as in rēg-is, dūc-o; by the addition or insertion of a consonant, as in tend-o, pang-o; by the addition of a terminal vowel, as in fuga, fugi-o; or by derivation and composition, following the laws of development peculiar to the language, as found in the perfect and supine of most verbs, and in numerous groups of derivatives and compounds.

2. Stems may be divided into two classes, — those ending in a vowel, called Vowel-Stems; and those ending in a consonant, called Consonant-Stems. They are combined with the Terminations, according to the rules of Inflection of Nouns (including Adjectives, Pronouns, and Participles), and of Verbs. The inflectional forms given by the former are called Declensions; those given by the latter are called Conjugations.

The Terminations of Declension had originally nearly the same meaning in Latin as the prepositions which answer to them in English. When combined with the stems of nouns, they form declensions, or groups of Cases, which vary according to the final vowel or consonant to which they are attached.

II. CLASSIFICATION OF NOUNS.

1. Vowel-Stems of Nouns may be classed in five divisions, ending respectively with the five vowels, a, e, i, o, u. These vowels are found at the termination of the Ablative Singular, and before the termination of the Genitive Plural, in all the declensions; and may be seen in the following examples:—

DECL.	I. (a)	V. (e)	III. (i)	II. (o)	IV. (u)
ABL. SING.	ārā	diē	nāvī	āvō	ācū
GEN. PLUR.	ārā rum	diē rum	nāvī um	āvō rum	ācū um

They may be illustrated by the following English words:—

comma, money, pony, arrow, cuckoo.

NOTE. — The terminal vowel i is often interchanged with e, as navi or nave; thus the ablative of the third declension in most nouns becomes e.

2. The Terminations of Declension, in their earliest form, in Latin, are not certainly known; but they are considered, from comparing the oldest monuments of the language with corresponding forms in other languages (especially Sanscrit and Greek), to have been nearly the following:—

	Nom.	Gen.	Dat.	Acc.	Abl.
SING.	s	is (ius)	i (bi)	m (n)	d
PLUR.	ses	rum	bus	ms	bus

NOTE. — In the nom. and acc. plural, the consonant is absorbed, lengthening the stem-vowel before the final s. The consonant so lost is either the hard sibilant s (nom.), or the obscure labial m (acc.), which is also dropped in poetry, before an initial vowel, by the usage called Ecthlipsis.

3. Combining these terminations with the stems (or “crude forms”) given above, we have the following table of inflections for the five declensions:—

Sing. I.	II.	III.	IV.	V.
N. arā s	avō s	avī s	acū s	diē s
G. ara is (āi)	avo is(ius)	avi is	acu is	die is (ēi)
D. ara i	avo i (i)	avi i	acu i	die i
A. ara m	avo m	avi m	acu m	die m
A. arā d	avō d	avī d	acū d	diē d
Plur.
N. ara es (ae)	avo es (i)	avies (ēs)	acues (ūs)	die es (ēs)
G. ara rum	avo rum	avi rum	acu rum	die rum
D. ara bus	avo bus	avi bus	acu bus	die bus
A. ara ms	avo ms	avi ms (is)	acu ms(ūs)	die ms (ēs)

1. The letters weakened or lost in process of use, are represented in the above Table in lighter type.

2. The abl. sing. ending in d is found in the oldest inscriptions: as, on the Column of Duilius, in altod marid, on the high sea. Its effect is seen in later use, in lengthening the stem-vowel: as in arā, from arā.

3. The endings āi, ius (gen. sing.), āi, i (dat. sing.), ābus, ōbus (dat., abl. plur.), remain in use in several words (§§ 9, 2, 4; 16, 1.; 18, 1., 2). The dative ending bi is found in tibi, sibi, and in the locative adverbs, ibi, ubi.

4. In the Third Declension, the stem-vowel i is retained in many words (as turris, puppis, T. 2, 1., 5, 6), in every case except the nom. plural: but, in most words of this declension, it is lost (or weakened into e) in the acc. and abl. singular also.

4. Consonant Stems are classed in four divisions, corresponding with the following classification of consonants:—

LIQUID, l, m, n, r.		Sibilant, s.
MUTE	Labial	surd p	sonant b	aspirate f (v) nasal m
„	Lingual	„ t	„ d	„ [th] „ n
„	Palatal	„ c (k)	„ g	„ [kh] „ [ng]

Nouns of consonant stems are all of the Third Declension. Many (especially monosyllables) having mute stems ending in two consonants (as urbs, nox), appear to be vowel stems that have lost in the nominative the characteristic vowel of this declension (i), which is found in the gen. plural urbium, noctium; in the old nominatives, sortis, trabis; and in the secondary form of the acc. plural, urbis, noctis.

5. The combination of consonant stems with the case-endings is shown as follows:—

Sing.	LIQUID.	LABIAL.	LINGUAL.	PALATAL.
NOM.	honor s (ōs)	op s	aetats (ās)	reg s (x)
GEN.	honor is	op is	aetat is	reg is
DAT.	honor i	op i	aetat i	reg i
ACC.	honor em	op em	aetat em	reg em
ABL.	honored	oped	aetated	reged
Plur.
NOM. ACC.	honor es	opes	aetates	reg es
GEN.	honor um	opum	aetat um	reg um
DAT. ABL.	honor ibus	opibus	aetatibus	regibus

1. The connecting vowel (ē, ī), where required to unite the stem with the termination, is given in lighter type.

2. In the plural of consonant-stems, and in all neuters,—not only in Latin, but in all kindred languages,—there is no separate form for the accusative.

3. Masculines and feminines of liquid stems, and neuters of mute stems, do not take s in the nominative.

4. Adjectives follow the same rules of inflection as nouns.

5. The personal and relative Pronouns (§§ 19, 21) have in several of their cases—as in mihi, tibi, illud, illius, cujus, and the obsolete med, quoniam, quoi—forms corresponding more nearly with the earliest case-endings than any that are found in nouns.

6. a. There is no special form for the Vocative in Latin, except in the singular of nouns in us, of the second declension. All Roman prænomens and gentile names (§ 15) — that is, all names by which a boy or man would commonly be addressed — are of this form; together with many of the words (such as filius, servus) most likely to be used as appellatives. These all have a vocative, or form of familiar and direct address, ending in the easy vowel sound ē or ī.

b. Nouns of the first declension, including all names of women and girls, end in the open vowel a, and require no special vocative form.

c. Nouns of the fourth and fifth declensions include very few words, and no class of words, likely ever to be used in direct address. So with mute-stems of the third declension, excepting a few, as dux, rex.

c. Most proper names or appellatives not ending in us are nouns of liquid stems. Those ending in l or r — as consul, imperator — require no modification, and the stem serves both for narrative and address. Those which end in n drop the final consonant, both in the nominative and vocative, which end in the open vowel o: these include many family names, as Cicero, Maro; with names of crafts, as caupo; and numerous nicknames, as verbero, common in the dramatists. Greek names, such as Plato, — which in Greek have the nom. Ὀν, shortened in the vocative into Ὀν, — also end in Latin in the open vowel o.

III. AGREEMENT.

Agreement, in gender, number, and case, is a form of inflection in the adjective, participle, etc., corresponding with that of the noun to which they belong. It is often a necessity in a language admitting great freedom in the arrangement of words, like Latin; but in many cases it seems to be merely the demand of the ear for harmony and correspondence. In these cases it is called Attraction.

1. In some cases, — as in most cardinal numbers, — where the adjective is closely and constantly connected with the noun it belongs to, so that there is no liability of confusion, no inflection is found.

2. In certain other cases, — as in the genitive of the personal pronouns, which in actual speech are thrown into close relations with a great variety of objects, — the limiting word tends to take the adjective inflection, for the sake of both euphony and clearness. In the case of the pronouns, this form of inflection is called the Possessive Adjective, which may be considered as a developed or inflected Genitive. It is used regularly for the genitive of possession; rarely for the objective genitive (§ 50, III., 1); and is constantly put in apposition with the genitive of nouns (§ 46, 3) — thus serving all the functions of a true genitive, but taking the adjective inflection, apparently in order to be more grateful to the ear. The so-called genitive of the personal pronoun, — mei, nostri, nostrum, tui, vestri, vestrum, — is held by Madvig to be the genitive (singular or plural) of the Possessive.

3. This is also the case with numerous other genitives, especially those of proper names, official titles, or personal appellatives, which in like manner often take the inflection of adjectives (§ 47, v.). Thus, patris becomes patrius; regis, regius; puer, puerilis; and Cicero (Att. IV. 3) uses the phrase, ex Anniana Milonis domo, out of Annius Milo's house.

4. In like manner, the names of months are reckoned as adjectives in Latin, and take the terminations agreeing with the words mensis (M.), kalendae, nonae, idus (F.), with which they are used.

5. An example of Attraction is seen in the usage called the Gerundive, — in which the governing participle (gerund) is made to agree with the word which it appears to govern. Thus, in the phrase urbis delendae causā, the direct construction would be, urbem delendī causā; for which the former appears to have been substituted purely for the sake of euphony. In older use, the gerund was probably the form oftenest employed, in all the cases: thus we have in Plautus the nominative agitandum est vigiliae, where in later use we should expect agitandae sunt vigiliae. Here, the gerundive “governs the word it agrees with,” — like the participle in the French, les plumes que j'ai achetées, where the compound verb is “attracted” into the gender and number of the object which it governs. So the corresponding Greek verbal is used, like the gerundive in Latin, in a passive sense, agreeing with the subject; while its neuter nominative is used actively, as a gerund, governing the object.

IV. INFLECTION OF VERBS.

The terminations of Conjugation — or personal endings of Verbs — had originally the same meaning with the pronouns which represent them in English. When combined with the stems of verbs, they form inflections, which vary, for conjugation, voice, mood and tense, according to the final consonant or vowel (or what is called the connecting vowel) of the stem to which they are attached.

Some of their earlier forms, as found in several languages more or less distantly related to Latin, may be seen in the following Table, giving the present indicative of the Substantive Verb to be (root, es) : —

	Sanskrit.	Greek.	Latin.	Slavonic.	Lithuanian.	English.
SING. 1.	as-mi	em-mi*	s-um	yes-mi	es-mi	am
2.	as-i	es-si*	es	yes-si	es-i	art
3.	as-ti	es-ti	es-t	yes-ti	es-ti	is
PLUR. 1.	s-mas	es-men	s-umus	yes-mu	es-me	(are)
2.	s-ta	es-te	es-tis	yes-te	es-te	(are)
3.	s-anti	(s)-enti*	s-unt	s-unti	es-ti	(are)

Verb-stems may be classed, like those of nouns, as vowel or consonant stems. Those ending in the vowels a, e, i, are found in verbs of the first, second, and fourth conjugations respectively; those ending in a consonant, in the third. A few stems ending in i or u are also classed with the third conjugation (see § 30, I., III.) A few ending in o — as boo, to bawl — take the connecting vowel of the first conjugation.

The personal endings of verbs, for the active and passive voice, are given in § 28. Their combination with the stem-vowel or consonant may be traced in the terminations of the four regular conjugations.

Verbs whose stem ends in a (first conjugation) have generally an active or transitive force: as, fugāre, put to flight, compared with the intransitive fugere, to flee.

Verbs whose stems end in e (second conjugation) have generally a neuter intransitive meaning, signifying a state or condition: as, caleo, to be hot, compared with calefacio (or -facto), to heat; or with the inceptive calesco, to grow hot.

For the signification of other derivative verb-forms, see § 36.

3. On some peculiar Constructions in Latin.

I. IDIOMS.

An Idiom is a form of phrase varying from the laws of general grammar, resulting from the habits of thought or custom of speech prevailing among any people.

Compared with most modern languages, especially English, there are very few idiomatic constructions in Latin. The most marked of all — the use of the Gerundive — has been treated under the head of Inflection. It may be regarded as simply a case of Attraction, and presents no difficulty whatever in the construction of the sentence.

The idiomatic expressions found in the dramatists, especially Plautus, are simply exhibitions of popular humor, coming rather under the designation of slang. They are very interesting as studies of the genius and temper of the people; but have had no effect whatever on the structure of the language itself, or its laws of composition.

The most idiomatic construction found in ordinary use is the Ablative Absolute (§ 54, x.) This may be described as simply the Apposition of the subject and predicate in parenthesis, — being introduced by way of explanation, and not depending on the main structure of the sentence in which it stands. Thus, in direct construction, Caesar consul erat, Caesar was consul; but in parenthesis, Caesare consule, while Caesar was consul. The predicate in Ablative Absolute is most frequently a participle; as, Caesare interfecto, when Caesar was slain; but it may be either a noun or adjective (as in the former example, — assuming, if we choose, the imaginary participle of esse, to be); or the neuter ablative of a passive participle used without any subject, — impersonally, or adverbially: as, consulto, deliberately (the matter having been consulted on).

II. SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES.

The chief difficulty of understanding Latin consists not (like that of modern languages) in the use of idioms, but in the great frequency and extent with which it employs a few easy grammatical artifices. These are, the use of the historical infinitive (§ 49, III.); the omission of the copula esse, — very common, especially in the periphrastic forms (§ 40), and in such condensed and elliptical writers as Tacitus; and the use of Substantive Clauses (§ 70). The last alone requires any special illustration. It may be briefly explained as follows:—

1. A phrase or sentence is often used in Latin, instead of a noun, either as Subject or Object of the leading verb. So used, it may be called a Substantive Clause.

2. When a substantive clause is used as Subject, its own principal verb may be in the Infinitive (with or without a subject-accusative), or in the Subjunctive with ut (§ 70, II., III.) The verb to which the clause is subject is then called Impersonal: as in the example, miseret me te esse pauperem; restat ut fortiter progrediamur.

3. When a substantive clause is used as Object, it usually depends on some verb of knowing, thinking, or telling (sentendi aut declarandi, § 52, VI.; 67, I., 2), and its own principal verb is in the Infinitive, with subject-accusative. It then called Oratio Obliqua (§ 67); and may be expanded into a narrative or discourse of indefinite length, frequent in Cæsar and in Livy.

4. Another form of the substantive clause — consisting of the indicative with quod — has been illustrated in § 70, IV.

5. The subordinate verb in a substantive clause always takes the subjunctive, when it expresses the reason of an act, or an essential part of the thought or argument; but not, necessarily, when the thought expressed by it may be regarded as distinct: thus, oportet puerum qui ludat vapulare, a boy who plays must be flogged; — where qui ludat gives the reason of the flogging; but, oportet hunc puerum, qui ludit, vapulare, this boy, who is playing, has got to be flogged, — perhaps for something else.

It will be observed that the Subjunctive Mood in Latin has, in general, no special meaning of its own, as distinct from the Indicative; but is only a parallel form of inflection, required in certain constructions, which have been classified in the Syntax.

Most of these cases may be reduced to two groups: first, Conditional Sentences,—including Implied Conditions, together with Wishes, Commands, and Purposes; secondly, Intermediate Clauses, which express the thought or feeling of some other person than the writer or speaker (§ 66, 1.) Such intermediate clauses are found especially in the Oratio Obliqua, and other classes of Substantive Clauses described above.

A few cases of Subjunctives are hard to reduce to either of these heads. Subjunctives of Result (§ 65) probably belong to the second head. They may be, however, as D'Arcy Thompson suggests, only an imitation of Final Clauses: in Greek, they take the Indicative.

NOTE. — Many of the statements and grammatical forms in the foregoing Supplement, especially in the section on Classification and Inflection, are taken from Bopp's Comparative Grammar, Key's Crude-form Grammar, and Donaldson's Complete Latin Grammar, together with his "Varronianus." The classifying of nouns by their vowel-endings was first proposed by Varro, the friend of Cicero, who took the form of the ablative singular as the basis of his system.

While we consider the view here presented to be of much interest and value as a key to the structure of the language, it may be well, in practice, to vary from the natural order in which the forms are given,—for example, in the third declension taking liquid stems first, as in "Latin Lessons;" and not to perplex the learner with any theory of stem-endings, till later in his course.

COURSE OF LATIN STUDY,

PREPARED BY

WILLIAM F. ALLEN, A.M.,

Professor of Ancient Languages and History in the University of Wisconsin;

AND

JOSEPH H. ALLEN,

Cambridge, Mass.

PUBLISHED BY EDWIN GINN

117, Washington Street, Boston.

This series is printed in clear and beautiful type, on tinted paper, and with a page uniform throughout; the Latin words used for examples or illustration being given in a special type cast expressly for these books.

I. MANUAL LATIN GRAMMAR.

pp. 145, with Index. Price $1.25.

This Grammar is designed to be "full and accurate enough to be a practical guide to the learner, while avoiding the prodigious multiplication of details which have so overgrown that study in the ordinary school textbooks." We have received the following from Harvard and Yale:—

CAMBRIDGE, Jan. 12, 1869.

ALLEN'S MANUAL LATIN GRAMMAR is approved as sufficient, in the hands of a competent instructor, to qualify a student for admission to Harvard College.

A. P. PEABODY, Acting President.

YALE COLLEGE, Jan. 18, 1869.

I should think it sufficient, in the hands of a good teacher, for the instruction of candidates for admission to college.

THOMAS A. THACHER.

II. LATIN LESSONS.

About 140 pages. Price $1.25.

"This book of Lessons is intended, first, as a guide to the study of Latin on the basis of the 'Manual Latin Grammar;' and secondly, as complementary to that book in several points which need amplifying in the actual business of elementary instruction." It consists of three Parts, corresponding to the divisions of the Grammar:—Part I. being made up of sixty lessons, carefully arranged, with exercises designed to ground the pupil thoroughly in the grammatical forms and the simpler principles of syntax; Part II. containing the text of the first twenty-nine chapters of Cæsar's "Gallic War" (the entire story of the Helvetic war), fully illustrated by map, notes, and grammatical explanation; Part III. containing a considerable variety of exercises in Prosody, both of hexameter and elegiac verse, making a complete introduction to the metres of Virgil and Ovid. Full Vocabularies are given at the end of the book.

III. LATIN READER.

This is now in press, and may be looked for in six months. It is to consist wholly of extracts from classical authors, — not fragmentary, but each complete in itself, and including Cæsar, Sallust, Curtius, Pliny, Phædrus, Ovid, and Cicero, — sufficiently varied, interesting, and full, to furnish a suitable course of easy reading for the use of classes not preparing for an extended college course.

The Vocabulary to accompany this Reader will cover nearly 200 pages, and is designed to contain all that the scholar will be likely to require in an extended course of Latin study. It will be published separately, serving most of the uses of the larger Lexicon, which costs so much of the student's time and eyesight.

IV. LATIN COMPOSITION.

A book of Advanced Exercises, adapted to the later stages of the pupil's course, and especially designed to secure a familiar knowledge of the idioms of the Latin tongue.

V. JULIUS CÆSAR.

A volume of about 350 pages; to include the whole of the Civil War, with such extracts from Cicero, Lucan, the Gallic War, and Cæsar's own correspondence, as to make it a full history of his public life and times, given, wherever it is possible, in his own words. To be illustrated by historical introduction, notes, and maps.

Boston, February, 1869.

ALLEN'S MANUAL LATIN GRAMMAR.

[From President HILL, of Harvard University.]

CAMBRIDGE, Aug. 7, 1868.

Rev. JOSEPH H. ALLEN.

DEAR SIR, — Of the details of your "Latin Grammar" I am not a competent judge; but the general plan and general execution I feel free to commend very warmly. The book seems to me to contain all that is necessary for those who do not wish to make a special study of philology; and to contain it in so brief a form as to give reasonable hope that a boy may become familiar with it without either overstraining his memory, or becoming disgusted with the quantity imposed on him. It is a great error to expand a text-book beyond the dimensions necessary for a clear statement of the subject.

Very respectfully yours,

THOMAS HILL

HARVARD COLLEGE, Aug. 26, 1868.

DEAR SIR, — Though it is not for me to speak with authority on such a subject, I believe that the publication of your "Manual Latin Grammar" will be of great service to the cause of classical studies in this country. By careful selection, arrangement, and condensation, in little more than one hundred pages of distinct and open type, you have endeavored to present all the grammatical forms and principles which the pupil, whether schoolboy or undergraduate, needs to commit to memory, and nothing more than he so needs, in order to read, understand, and appreciate any Latin classic; and I think you have succeeded. At any rate, whatever else of grammatical science the pupil ought to possess may be most profitably learned in the classroom, from the lips of his instructor, who will want for occasional reference some more comprehensive work. A big grammar is necessarily a big evil, and ought to be kept out of the hands of the learner, for it tends only to dishearten him and give him a disgust for his task. It is usually a wilderness of words, a heterogeneous mass of anomalies, technicalities, and theoretical refinements, often of questionable correctness, and generally ill-arranged, ill-expressed, and ill-printed. Your book evidently has great merits; it seems to me a master-piece of brevity, method, and clearness. For the use of schools and colleges in this country, I hope it will supersede every larger work, and only be superseded, should one be published hereafter equally concise, and still more lucid, methodical, and trustworthy. It will then probably have had a long term of service. Very truly yours,

FRANCIS BOWEN.

[From S. H. TAYLOR, Andover.]

ANDOVER, Sept. 1, 1868.

Rev. Mr. ALLEN.

MY DEAR SIR, — I am greatly obliged to you for the copy of your Latin Grammar which you had the kindness to send me. I am much pleased with the plan and execution of the work. It contains all the general principles of the language, clearly and concisely stated, and is sufficiently full to meet the ordinary wants of the pupil in the early part of his course. I am glad to see a Latin Grammar in so compact, and yet so complete, a form. It is very happily adapted to smooth the path of the pupil in the study of the Latin language. The type, and the whole mechanical execution, are a great luxury to the eye. I congratulate you and your brother on your success in the work, and am sure that you have done a valuable service to the cause of classical learning. With great respect, very truly yours,

S. H. TAYLOR.

[From Prof. E. W. GURNEY, of Harvard College.]

TOUCHING the main point that was spoken of, — the sufficient fulness of the treatment of the noun and adjective, — you seem to me to have shown excellent judgment. Truly yours,

PROF. E. W. GURNEY,

CAMBRIDGE, Aug. 8.

Harvard College.

[From Prof. HENRY W. HAYNES, of the University of Vermont.]

UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT,
BURLINGTON, Sept. 9, 1868.

I have examined your Manual Latin Grammar quite carefully, and am exceedingly pleased with both the plan and the execution of it. It supplies the great desideratum of a brief elementary grammar, at once simple and concise, and, at the same time, accurately embodying the latest results of scholarship. The clear and terse statement of principles seems to meet the practical requirements of a text-book.

[From President of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.]

ITHACA, N.Y., Sept. 5, 1868.

Rev. J. H. ALLEN.

DEAR SIR,—Accept my sincere thanks for your "Latin Grammar." It gives some hope for classical scholarship. I have been long convinced that the most dangerous foes of classical studies are not the men who decry them,—the Philistines,—but the men who smother them,—the Pedants. If classical scholarship shall ever be utterly neglected among us, it will be because those appointed to promote it, have substituted for the great works of the great minds of antiquity, endless gerund-grinding, and second-hand scraps of doubtful philosophy, and metaphysics of the subjunctive mood.

Modern grammarians have become generally so long and so dreary, that there is no time for ancient authors.

I renew my thanks to you, and to your brother, for making the study of Cicero and Tacitus and Erasmus again possible, by giving us a sufficient grammar, short and to the point.

I remain, dear sir, very truly yours,

ANDREW D. WHITE.

[From Prof. J. E. CLARK, Antioch College, Ohio.]

It seems to me a real little jewel, clear-cut and sparkling. The principles that guided you are excellent, and you appear to have carried them out with rare judgment and fidelity. It is by no means a minor merit that the examples are so copious, carefully selected and idiomatically translated,—though I believe the necessity of translating examples for beginners has come to be pretty generally recognized. I am glad that you enunciate so distinctly in your preface, as an article of faith, that the language and the literature are the real objects of study, not grammar, except as a subsidiary, and I remember the passage in which you express this conviction struck me as very forcible. After a few months' instruction in this spirit in your manual, and due "praxis in some chosen short-book lessoned thoroughly to him," such as the "Exercises" you promise, I see no reason why any intelligent youth, fond of study, may not at once proceed with delight to the literature, and study at the same time the Roman tongue and the ideas of the Roman world, and thus get what Milton—to borrow again from him—called the "substance of good things," of which he very justly regarded language as but the form.

Ever truly yours,

JOHN E. CLARK

[From J. H. HANSON, of Waterville, Me., Editor of the Preparatory Course of Latin Prose.]

I HAVE examined with some care the copy of Allen's "Latin Grammar," which you so kindly sent me, and am highly pleased with both the plan and execution of the work. It comprehends all the principles of the Latin language which the student in the regular collegiate course needs to know, and its statements are so clear and concise that his labor must be very much lightened.

Very respectfully yours,

J. H. HANSON

[From Professor WHITNEY, of Yale College.]

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 4, 1868.

WE are very favorably impressed here by Professor Allen's work, and, as you will see in the College Catalogue, when it appears, have taken it as the standard for the knowledge of Latin grammar which shall be expected of those who present themselves for entrance to the Sheffield Scientific School. My confidence in the learning and the spirit of its authors is very high.

Yours respectfully,

W. D. WHITNEY.

[From the Boston Evening Transcript.]

MOST of the champions of classical education are agreed in objecting to the ordinary Latin grammars. John Stuart Mill in England, Prof. Bowen, Mr. Fiske, and others in this country, equally believe in the importance of the study of the Latin language, and are equally earnest in recommending a simplification of the method of studying it. This Manual contains but a hundred and twenty pages; but the authors claim that it is a sufficient text-book for the learner. . . . Such a work deserves the attention which the character of the authors and the importance of the subject imperatively demand. The champions of classical studies cannot stand, and do not hope to stand, on the present methods of teaching. Those methods are denounced by the warmest advocates of the value of the Greek and Latin languages to a man assuming to be "liberally" educated. The "Manual" of the Messrs. Allen is therefore an experiment of some importance. It is the attempt of two accomplished Latin scholars to have the study of Latin adapted to the principles of good sense.

[From Professor MAGILL, of Swarthmore College, Penn.]

I HAVE examined, with great care and eminent satisfaction, your new "Manual Latin Grammar;" and do not hesitate to pronounce it, in the language of the preface, "full and accurate enough to be a practical guide to the learner, but avoiding the prodigious multiplication of details which have so overgrown that study in our ordinary school text-books." The editors seem to have been very successful in selecting and presenting, in a concise and intelligible form, the essential principles of the language. This unpretending, yet most excellent little book, well mastered, will make far more accurate and thorough Latin scholars than the painful and discouraging study of the more voluminous grammars in common use. Among so much that is excellent it is difficult to particularize; but I may mention the condensed view of the conjugations of the verbs; the truly philosophical treatment of the subjunctive, and the article on the quantity of penultimate syllables.

No one can speak fully of the value of such a book until it has been subjected to the test of the class-room; but it is very clear that this methodical and perspicuous statement of the principles of Latin grammar is the ripe fruit of long and successful experience there. It gave me great satisfaction to find several subjects abridged and presented in almost the identical form which I have found it necessary to adopt for years in the practical work of the class-room.

This book will not supply the place of oral instruction, and no good text-book will do that. Amplifications and full explanations must come from the lips of the living teacher only.

EDWARD H. MAGILL.

[From the Unitarian "Monthly Journal."]

THIS little work of 127 pages is worthy of the highest praise, as a monument of painstaking fidelity, and of thorough acquaintance with the structure of language and with the principles of instruction. Within this short compass, in clear, distinct type, and with ample illustration, is given all that is really essential for such comprehension of Latin as is usually attained in the school and college course. We commend it to all who are interested in the cause of education, and believe it is likely to find a wide acceptance.
